THE PRINTER'S DEVIL.

BY TYP. O. QUAD.

Ink-bespattered,
Clothing tattered,
With his broom in hand,
Leaning, cleaning,
Rubbing, scrubbing,
Under every stand.

'Neath the cases,
Type and spaces—
Trampled where they fell—
By this Pluto
Doomed to go to Printer's leather 'hell.'

Running hither,
Darting thither,
Tail of all the staff,
Out and in-doors,
Doing all chores,
Bringing telegraph.

Runs for copy,
Nor dare stop he
For his paper hat;
All the jour men,
Save the foreman,
Yelling for some "phat."

Proves the galleys;
Then he sallies,
On Satanic opinion,
From the news-room
To his sanctum—
Part of his dominion.

And the bosses—
Often cross as
Bears within their holes—
Make the devil
Find his level
Stirring up the coals.

Washing roller,
Bringing coal or Lugging water pail;
Time he wastes not
At the paste-pot,
Wrapping up the nail.

When the week's done,
Then he seeks one
Where the greenbacks lay,
There to settle
For the little
Devil is to pay.

In this spirit
There is merit,
Far from a taint of shame;
Often gaining
By his training
Good and honored name.

Scientific men,

HALL'S Vegetable Sicilian Hair Renewer

Every year increases the popularity of this valuable Hair Preparation, which is due to merit alone. We can assure our old patrons that it is kept fully up to its high standard, and to those who have never used it we can confidently say, that it is the only reliable and perfected preparation to restore GRAY OR FADED HAIR to its youthful color, making it soft, lustrous, and silken;
the scalp, by its use, becomes white and clean; it removes all eruptions and dandruff, and by its tonic properties prevents the hair from falling out, as it stimu-lates and nourishes the hair glands. By its use the hair grows thicker and stronger. Its baldness it restores the capillary glands to their normal vigor, and will create a new growth, except in extreme old age. It is the most economical HAIR DRESSING ever used, as it requires fewer applications, and gives the hair that splendid glossy appearance
so much admired by all. A. A.
Hayes, M.D., State Assayer of Mass., says, "the constituents are pure and carefully selected for excellent quality, and I consider it the BEST PREPARATION for its intended purposes." We publish a treatise on the hair, which we send free by mail upon application, which contains commendatory notices from clergymen, physicians, the press, and others.
We have made the study of the hair and its diseases a specialty for years, and know that we make the most effective preparation for the restoration and the preserva-

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs,
such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma,

Among the great discoveries of modern science, few are of more real value to mankind than this effectual remedy for all diseases of the Throat and Lungs. A vast trial of its virtues throughout this and citizens of all classes, establishes the fact, that AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL will and does relieve and cure the afflicting disorders of the Throat and Lungs beyond any other medicine. The most dangerous affections of the Pulmonary Organs yield to its power; and cases of Consumption, cured by this preparation, are publicly known, so remarkable as hardly to be believed, were they not proved beyond dispute.

As a remedy for full prostration, by curing Coughs,
the forerunners of more serious disease, it saves unnumbered lives, and an amount of suffering not to be computed. It challenges trial, and convinces the most sceptical. Every family should

ALMA'S HAIR.

BY LOTTIE BROWN.

Dyke Bancroft bent over the figure
at the piano, and touched the bronzed braids that lay on Alma Day's queenly head.

"What a wealth of hair, Miss Alma!
All your own, of course?"

She laughed, and ran her white fingers up and down the keys. Then she turned her face,—that rare, pink
and white face, which had distracted
so many in its day—up to his own,
and said—

"Yet you confess to wearing a false heart, Alma."

She dashed out another brilliant strain, and bent her head a little to hide the flush of vexation, which mantled her cheeks. Dyke Bancroft was not the man to exchange meaningless words. He knew more than any other she knew, and cared less (she believed) for her smiles and blandishments.

We covet that we cannot reach;
and so Alma would give her life, to know that he did not mean what he said.

After a moment, she looked up.
His dark eyes were ready to meet her own.

"What do you know of my heart?"
"As much, perhaps, as any one,
and that is but the merest trifle more than nothing. Yet what I do know, teaches me—"

"Don't pause. Go on."
"That Alma Day is beyond the reach of poor devils like myself."

Again that gay laugh, and the nervous rattling of white hands upon the ivory keys.

"You do not know everything,"
she said, at length. "No! but I can think."

Some one passed the win low just then, and called, "Dyke!" and when he went away to see what it meant,
Alma vanished through the parlor
door, and went away to her room.

There was a nice little party in that pretty country house that summer.

There were no very aristocratic people, or any one likely to shock or disturb the equanimity of any one;
so they lived on, week after week, in perfect harmony.

There was very little love-making,
a great deal of fishing and croqueting,
card playing, and dancing and gossiping.

Alma Day and her mother were rich, perhaps the only ones there that merited the title, but Mrs. Day was an invalid, and gay life did not suit her as well as this quiet, country living; so Alma contentedly passed her summers wherever there was the most peace and comfort for her mother.

"There is one thing certain, Alma Day, with all her heartlessness, is good to her mother."

Everybody said this, and though she smiled on every one in her train, and drove one half of them to the verge of distraction, yet everybody respected her, because of her filial obedience.

That very night, as Dyke stepped out through the window, he met Tom Alton, who said—

"So you're in for it, are you? Why —Alma, she won't have you?"

By curing Coughs, the forerunners of more serious disease, it saves unnumbered lives, and an amount of suffering not to be computed. It challenges trial, and convinces the most sceptical. Every family should keep it on hand as a protection against the early and unperceived attack of Pulmonary Affections, which are easily cured at first, but which become incurable, and too often fatal, if neglected. Tender lungs need this defence; and it is unwise to be without it. As a safeguard to children, against the distressing diseases which beset the Throat and Chest of childhood, CHERRY PECTORAL is invaluable; for, by its timely use, multitudes are rescued from premature graves, and saved to the love and affection centred on them. It acts speedily and surely against ordinary colds, securing sound and health-restoring sleep. No one will suffer from the troublesome Influenza and painful Bronchitis, when they know how easily they can be cured.

Originally the product of long, laborious, and successful chemical investigation, no cost or toil is spared in making every bottle in the utmost possible perfection. It may be confidently relied upon as possessing all the virtues it has ever exhibited, and capable of producing cures as memorable as the greatest it has ever effected.

"Don't pause. Go on."

"That Alma Day is beyond the reach of poor devils like myself."

Again that gay laugh, and the nervous rattling of white hands upon the ivory keys.

"You do not know everything," she said, at length. "No! but I can think."

Some one passed the winnow just then, and called, "Dyke!" and when he went away to see what it meant, Alma vanished through the parlor door, and went away to her room.

That very night, as Dyke stepped out through the window, he met Tom Alton, who said—

"So you're in for it, are you? Why man alive, she won't have you?"

"I have not asked her."

"But you will, and have the pleasure of being laughed at, for your presumption."

"She is a good daughter."

"And will make a Senator, or some other honorable snob, a good wife, but she will not stoop to you and I. On the whole, Dyke, what could we do with such a woman? It is no great trouble to be kind to her mother, but she wouldn't, I dare swear, make a sacrifice for even her. She is a terrible bunch of selfishness and frivolity. What were you talking about when I came up? False hair wasn't it?"

"Yes!"

THE PRINTER'S DEVIL.

BY TYP. O. QUAD.

Ink-bespattered,
Clothing tattered,
With his broom in hand,
Leaning, cleaning,
Rubbing, scrubbing,
Under every stand.

Neath the cases,
Type and spaces—
Trampled where they fell—
By this Pluto
Doomed to go to
Printer's leather "hell."

Running hither.
Darting thither,
Tail of all the staff,
Out and in-doors,
Doing all chores,
Bringing telegraph.

Runs for copy,
Nor dare stop he
For his paper hat;
All the jour men,
Save the foreman,
Yelling for some "phat."

Proves the galleys;
Then he sallies,
On Satanic opinion,
From the news-room
To his sanctum—
Part of his dominion.

And the bosses
Often cross as
Bears within their holes—
Make the devil
Find his level
Stirring up the coals.

Washing roller,
Bringing coal or
Lugging water pail;
Time he wastes not
At the paste-pot,
Wrapping up the mail.

When the week's done,
Then he seeks one
Where the greenbacks lay,
There to settle
For the little
Devil is to pay.

In this spirit
There is merit,
Far fro a taint of shame;
Often gaining
By his training
Good and honored name.

Legislators,
Great debaters,
Scientific men,
Have arisen,

was false, did you?"

"Yes!"
"By Jove! Of course she told you no, and you believed her. She has got seventy-five dollars worth there, at the very least."

Dyke had not the disposition to say anything more upon the subject, so he walked away, and mused upon the frivolity and worthlessness of women in general, and of Alma Day in particular.

Alma went quietly up to her own room, her face vexed and troubled, and as she opened the door she was prepared to relieve herself, woman fashion, of a great portion of her sorrow, by having a good cry, but something from her mother's room, arrested her, and she went in there.

Mrs. Day was lying back in her chair, as white as death, and a tall professional looking man was standing there, looking with a sort of inexpressible pity at her.

"Why, mother! Why, Mr. Deane, what is the matter?"

He turned, and put out his hand. "Don't Miss Alma! You have need of great strength and fortitude, just now."

This man was their lawyer, and the controller of their financial affairs, and holding, as it were, the reins of her existence.

"What is it?" she asked growing weak and white.

"The——speculations have failed."

"Who has been speculating?"

"Your mother."

"My mother?"

"I thought we might as well be richer or poorer," whined a feeble voice from the chair.

"And you, Mr. Deane, conducted these speculations at my weak mother's request, without even consulting me?"

"Yes, Miss Alma, but——"

"Yes, I know, it was all her property, but she is old. Well, what has she lost?"

"Every dollar."

"The house?"

"Gone! Everything is gone."

"Oh, mother!"

But that was all she said, and somehow the lawyer felt that he was no longer needed, and he slunk away out of sight of the great, grieved, reproachful eyes of the poverty stricken girl.

It was kept very silent for a day or two, and then Alma went away to the city. She had very little money and their board bill was due, so she went away with a grand project in

THE PERILS OF BALLOONING.

From the Memphis Avalanche.

The balloon ascension connected with Noye's circus is one of that show's great cards. Every afternoon great crowds congregate on the bluffs to witness it. Yesterday the usual multitude assembled to witness Prof. Fisher, the aeronaut, perform his feats on the trapeze attached to the balloon with four strong half-inch cords.

In making the ascension, the balloon—a common yellow canvas affair—is filled with hot air by means of an alcoholic fire which is burned immediately beneath the lower and opened end of the canvas; when filled Prof. Fisher leaps on his slender trapeze, the fastening ropes are cast loose, and the large yellow monster goes off like a rocket in an upward direction for about five hundred feet, when it yields to the current of the wind and goes with it.

THE FATAL FLIGHT.

The balloon yesterday, after being cast loose, shot directly upward, and then moved directly toward the Gayoso House. So certain were many of the spectators on the roof that it was coming directly over the house they ran down stairs. Just before it reached the house, however, it commenced to descend rapidly, and in doing so swerved to the north and left of the Gayoso and in a direct line for the Jackson Block, which it struck a moment later. In striking the Block, the balloon proper was above the level of the roof, while

PROF. FISHER AND THE TRAPEZE

struck the wall some eight feet beneath the guttering of the roof. The aeronaut's head struck the brick wall first, but recovering himself he placed his feet against the wall and pushed violently outward, with a hope, doubtless, of clearing the roof. All this time the huge inflated canvass was tugging away at the small ropes—the guttering of the roof being iron, with a sharp, almost knife-like edge, it in a few seconds severed the ropes, which, by the combined weight of the professor and the balloon, were strained to their utmost tension, and the man of the air with a loud cry fell

"PUT DOWN FOR ONCE."

A VOICE FROM THE LADIES' GALLERY—
MINISTER OF MILITIA AWAKES
THE ATTENTION OF THE INFANTRY—AN AMUSING SCENE IN THE
HOUSE OF COMMONS.

Last week an intensely dry debate took place in the House on the Representation Bill which would have been totally devoid of interest to the occupants of the galleries, but for an incident that occurred about 9:30 o'clock. Mr. Workman had concluded a long winded and somewhat violent speech advocating the right of the Protestant minority of Montreal to representation in the Commons, and protesting annexing Griffintown to his constituency. To his arguments Sir George Cartier rose to reply, and was answering the hon. member for Montreal Centre in a somewhat forcible style when, in the middle of his speech, an infant, which had been brought to the gallery by its mother, set up a howl like a small steam-whistle. At first it was thought to be an invention of a "silent member" anxious to put a stop to the debate. But as the squalls continued, all eyes were directed to a particular part of the Ladies Gallery there was no mistaking the sound as a genuine Simon Pure article, the cry of a lusty infant, awakened by the powerful arguments of the Minister of Militia. The roars of laughter that followed the baby's maiden speech were deafening. Some of the members cried "Hear! hear!" Others gave the young orator an encore. Sir George reddened; the ladies blushed; and the House was completely demoralized for a moment. In the midst of it all, the Minister of Militia stopped short in his speech, and Mr. Holton's deep and powerful voice was heard to exclaim, "Put down for once," alluding to Sir George Cartier.

Sir George heard him, turned him like a flash, and bending toward him with an enquiring look, said, "I think I heard the hon. member for Chateauguay say 'Put down for once; did I?'"

Mr. Holton—Yes; I said the hon. gentlemen was put down for once. Sir George Cartier—Yes, I was put down for once. I did not know but what it was the "little devil" to which my hon. friend from Montreal Centre alluded a short time ago (referring to an expression made use of a short time previous by Mr. Workman, who said he would defend the rights of his constituents, "in

ALMA'S HAIR.

BY LOTTIE BROWN.

Dyke Bancroft bent over the figure
at the piano, and touched the bronzed
braids that lay on Alma Day's queen-
ly head.

"What a wealth of hair, Miss Alma!
All your own, of course!"

She laughed, and ran her white
fingers up and down the keys. Then
she turned her face, - that rare, pink
and white face, which had distracted
so many in its day—up to his own,
and said—

"Yet you confess to wearing a false
heart, Alma."

She dashed out another brilliant
strain, and bent her head a little to hide the flush of vexation, which mantled her cheeks. Dyke Bancroft did not the man to exchange meaningless words. He knew more than any other she knew, and cared less

His dark eyes were ready to meet

Again that gay laugh, and the nervous rattling of white hands upon

"You do not know everything,"
she said, at length. "No! but I can

Some one passed the window just then, and called, "Dyke!" and when he went away to see what it meant,
Alma vanished through the parlor
door, and went away to her room.

There was a nice little party in that
pretty country house that summer.

There were no very aristocratic

There was very little love-making,

That very night, as Dyke stepped reproachful eyes of the poverty stricken girl.

It was kept very silent for a day or two, and then Alma went away to the city. She had very little money and their board bill was due, so she went away with a grand project in her brain.

And left alone, though but for a few hours poor Mrs. Day must needs send for some one to sit with her, and finally she worried herself into a state of helpless confidence, and told the whole story, with many and bitter tears.

That night everybody knew it,
and Tom Alton drew Dyke aside to say—

"I am sorry for her. But mark me, she will lay her plans with the cunning of a diplomatist, she will marry some rich old fogey before the year ends. She is as cunning as a fox."

"And in the meantime, what will she do? Work, I suppose."

"Work! Not she. She has plenty of rich relatives."

Dyke wondered in his heart if she would do this, but all the while he pitied her, as men pity only those in whom they feel an unaccountable interest.

When the evening train came, he watched for her coming, and stood out on the piazza to speak to her.

She came up slowly, as though she was worn past all telling, and when after a moment she flung back her veil, she showed a face as pale as death, and ten years older than the one he had looked into but a few nights before.

There was something odd about her appearance, but what it was, he did not readily detect.

As she drew near, he stepped down and walked along to meet her.

"You are tired," he said, taking her small reticule.

"Worn out, Mr. Bancroft."

"Well!"

"You look as sober as a judge, what is the matter?"

"Oh, Alma, don't! I see that you are as brave as a regiment of men, but don't crush your trouble back upon your heart. I know all about it, from beginning to end."

"That I am poor?"

"Yes, Alma."

She smiled, and said—

"Well, it is all right. Ma will be lovingly received into Uncle Henry's family, and I—well, I am going to sew, and teach the children in the family of an old friend."

"Alma Day?"

"Yes! Why not? I am well and strong, and haven't the courage to live in dependence."

He pressed her hand.

"I have saved ma from trouble, and raised enough to keep her in pin money, for a little while."

She pushed her hat back, and revealed her small, finely shaped head.
The long, shining braids were gone,
and in their stead, there was a short crop of locks, with the mark of the hair dealer's scissors fresh upon them.

"Alma! What have you done?"

"Sold my hair. It was really all my own."

He put his arm around her.

"Alma, forgive me for my abruptness, but I cannot wait. You must not bear this alone. Be my wife, darling, and let me labor for you, and bear all your burden. Oh, Alma, I love you."

She put her hands out, with a burst of happy tears.

"Have my shorn locks brought me all this happiness?"

and the man of the air with a loud cry fell

DOWN, DOWN, DOWN,

a distance of at least fifty feet, and alighted on an iron grating, which his weight cracked as if of glass.* In falling the unfortunate man turned several somersaults; but, with the exception of the first short passionate cry, not a sound escaped him. A large cellar extends under the block, and through an iron grating he fell headlong.

The grating through which he fell is that of R. G. Craig & Co's seed store, and just as he

SHOT BY THE WINDOW

like a meteor, one of the salesmen who was in the rear of the store saw him. Running out and ascertaining that the white flying object was a man, then insensible and seemingly dead, the clerk called for assistance, and carefully removed the wounded and almost pulverized man up stairs and into the store. Surgeons and physicians were summoned in a few moments, and everything possible was done to alleviate the intense suffering of the poor man. Dr. Hall, after a careful examination, stated that the right shoulder arm-bone was

LITERALLY PULVERIZED,

and that he was also suffering from concussion of the brain. A gash on the right forehead, another on the right cheek, and still another under the right chin, were the wounds visible on the face. In the pit of the left arm was

A HORRID GASH,

fully three inches in length, and extending into the socket. The latter wound was caused by one of the small ropes tearing from under his arm, where he had it fastened safely, and it is only surprising that the rope did not wrench the arm from the socket.

HISTORY OF THE AERONAUT.

From members of the circus the following history of Prof. Fisher was obtained. His right name is George E. Clarke, and he is a man twenty-three years of age. He is of a most respectable family now residing in Columbus, Ohio. About two years since he joined Grady's circus, then travelling in the North as a general utility man, afterwards becoming what is known as a "candy butcher."
While with Grady he made one or two ascensions under the superintendence of Professor Fisher whose name he afterwards assumed. In November last he perfected an engagement with Mr. C. W. Noyes and since then has regularly made ascensions.

WAS IT A PREMONITION?

Before starting yesterday on his flight to death, he remarked to a friend,
"Jim, this will be my last ascension in a balloon," and as he soared away he repeated halloo: "Good-by boys!"
"good-bye," and continued waving his hands until far above the crowd of spectators. The fatal result of yesterday's ascension, with the other death flight at Decatur last week where a young man was drowned in the Tennessee river, should convince every one that this species of daring is simply foolhardy.

DEATH OF CLARKE.

Mr. Clarke, while being removed to the hospital, never recovered his consciousness, and last night, about 11 o'clock, he breathed his last. From the time the ropes severed, he never would do this, but all the while he pitied her, as men pity only those in whom they feel an unaccountable interest.

When the evening train came, he watched for her coming, and stood out on the piazza to speak to her.

She came up slowly, as though she was worn past all telling, and when after a moment she flung back her veil, she showed a face as pale as death, and ten years older than the one he had looked into but a few nights before.

There was something odd about her appearance, but what it was, he did not readily detect.

As she drew near, he stepped down and walked along to meet her.

"You are tired," he said, taking her small reticule.

"Worn out, Mr. Bancroft."

"Well."

"You look as sober as a judge, what is the matter?"

"Oh, Alma, don't! I see that you are as brave as a regiment of men, but don't crush your trouble back upon your heart. I knew all about it, from beginning to end."

"That I am poor?"

"Yes, Alma."

She smiled, and said—

"Well, it is all right. Ma will be lovingly received into Uncle Henry's family, and I—well, I am going to sew, and teach the children in the family of an old friend."

"Alma Day?"

"Yes! why not? I am well and strong, and haven't the courage to live in dependence."

He pressed her hand.

"I have saved ma from trouble, and raised enough to keep her in pin money, for a little while."

She pushed her hat back, and revealed her small, finely shaped head. The long, shiving braids were gone, and in their stead, there was a short crop of locks, with the mark of the hair dealer's scissors fresh upon them.

"Alma! What have you done?"

"Sold my hair. It was really all my own."

He put his arm around her.

"Alma, forgive me for my abruptness, but I cannot wait. You must not bear this alone. Be my wife, darling, and let me labor for you, and bear all your burden. Oh, Alma, I love you."

She put her hands out, with a burst of happy tears.

"Have my shorn locks brought me all this happiness?"

"Not the locks, darling, but the noble spirit that made the sacrifice."

So these two were married, and for aught I know, lived happy ever after—ards.

HISTORY OF THE AERONAUT.

From members of the circus the following history of Prof. Fisher was obtained. His right name is George E. Clarke, and he is a man twenty-three years of age. He is of a most respectable family now residing in Columbus, Ohio. About two years since he joined Grady's circus, then travelling in the North as a general utility man, afterwards becoming what is known as a "candy butcher." While with Grady he made one or two ascensions under the superintendence of Professor Fisher whose name he afterwards assumed. In November last he perfected an engagement with Mr. C. W. Noyes and since then has regularly made ascensions.

WAS IT A PREMONITION?

Before starting yesterday on his flight to death, he remarked to a friend, "Jim, this will be my last ascension in a balloon," and as he soared away he repeated halloo: "Good-by boys," "good-bye," and continued waving his hands until far above the crowd of spectators. The fatal result of yesterday's ascension, with the other death flight at Decatur last week where a young man was drowned in the Tennessee river, should convince every one that this species of daring is simply foolhardy.

DEATH OF CLARKE.

Mr. Clarke, while being removed to the hospital, never recovered his consciousness, and last night, about 11 o'clock, he breathed his last. From the time the ropes severed, he never spoke an intelligible word. His remains will be taken charge of by Mr. Noyes.

While the Spanish steamship "Madaya" was lying in the port of Marseilles, France, yesterday, crowded with passengers, her boiler exploded. The entire upper portion of the ship was torn to pieces. Of those on board few escaped death or injury. Forty-four passengers and eleven of the officers and crew were killed. Immediately after the explosion the steamer took fire, and the flames communicated to the dock. A serious conflagration was threatened, and several hundred bales of cotton were consumed. Ultimately the flames were subdued.

What Canada has to sell is worth all the Dominion would buy of the United States Government, and any result from complications that does not recognize this fact will be unsatisfactory to our people. The Government know this position well. Their large majorities which forced the measure through the House, were forced majorities, and represented no popular will. Were the questions, Treaty or no Treaty, put to Canada to-day, there could be no doubt of the result of the vote, even though every contingency that may possibly attach to the situation were bodily included. Canada would never accept the Treaty under a threat; and with equal force can it be said that a bribe would be scornfully rejected—even though that bribe came from the Parent State.

WHAT SLEEP WILL CURE.

The "Herald of Health" discourses in this style: "The cry for sleep has always been louder than the cry for food. Not that it is more important, but it is harder to get. The best rest is from sleep. Of two men, otherwise equal, the one who sleeps the best, will be the most moral, healthy and efficient. Sleep will do much to cure irritability of temper, peevishness, uneasiness. It will cure insanity. It will restore to vigor an over-worked brain. It will build up and make strong a weary body. It will do much to cure dyspepsia, particularly that variety known as nervous dyspepsia. It will relieve languor and prostrations felt by consumptives. It will cure hypochondria. It will cure the blues. It will cure headache. It will cure neuralgia. It will cure a broken spirit. It will cure a broken spirit. It will cure sorrow. Indeed we might make a list of numerous maladies that sleep will cure.

This cure of sleeplessness, however is not so easy, particularly in those who carry heavy responsibilities. The habit of sleeping well is one which, if broken up for any length of time, is not easily regained. Often a severe illness treated by powerful drugs, so deranges the nervous system that sleep is never sleep—is never sweet afterward. Or, perhaps, long continued watchfulness produces the same effect; or hard study, or too little exercise of the muscular system, or tea and whisky drinking, and tobacco using. To break up the habit are required:

- 1st. A good clean bed.
- 2nd. Sufficient exercise to produce weariness, pleasant occupations.
- 3rd. Good air and too warm a room.
- 4th. Freedom from too much care.
- 5th. A clear stomach.
- 6th. A clear conscience.
- 7th. Avoidance of stimulants and narcotics.

For those who are overworked, haggard, nervous, who pass sleepless nights, we commend the adoption of such habits as will secure their sleep, otherwise life will be short, and what there is of it will be sadly imperfect.

nesses there will be to compensate for all the expense. At length our guests take their departure and host and hostess sit down in their several arm chairs, glad of a little quiet, to congratulate each other that the affair is over; and then after many cross looks and perhaps some cross words, all the grandeur is washed again, and dried again, and put away and the tired mistress and maids get to their beds, to rest their limbs and to sweeten their tempers.

"Now, to avoid all this, take my advice. One of the great shames of the present day is, that people have not the manliness to confess to being what they really are, but will try to ape those who have more money than themselves. You are going to-morrow morning to get your crockery, glass, and cutlery. My advice is, go in for what is straightforward, simple and honest. But a good wholesome, respectable article; no more costly than you can afford, and not so shabby that you will be ashamed to set it before your friends. Then, when you want to exercise your hospitality, you will only have to put a few more plates and glasses and knives and forks, upon your table; you will make your friends whose opinion is worth twopence all the happier, because they see that you are not afraid to be real, and you will enjoy their company all the more, because their visit is unalloyed by a sense that the trouble they have given is any more than you and your husband could reasonably and cheerfully undergo."

I am not ashamed to confess that that conversation not only modified my plans in regard to my first furnishing, but has influenced my views and actions in other matters.

The fact is, I do believe that thousands among us are the servants of their clothes or horses, instead of those things serving them. Instead of their property ministering to their comfort, the great employment of their time and thought is how to take care of their property. The man with £500 a year tries to make his neighbor think he has £1,000; while his neighbor, with £1,000 a year is practicing all sorts of little expedients to persuade the rest of us that he has £2,000.—London Christian Times.

HALLS AND SCHOOL ROOMS.—While sulphurous acid, chloride of lime and carbolate of lime cannot be used without inconvenience, on account of their unpleasant odor, in frequented rooms, chemical science has recently brought out a disinfectant apparently more effective than either, which can be safely and conveniently used anywhere, since it is free from odor, and when properly diluted does no harm to the color or texture of carpets or furniture. This is bromo-chloralum. Would it not be worth while, as a sanitary measure occasionally to sprinkle the floors of our school rooms, churches and other assembly rooms with it? If this were done at the close of a session, the air, instead of being kept in its foul condition until the next gathering, would be cleared of its impurities. If the sprinkling

Welcome, O Stork! thou dost wing
Thy flight from the far-away!
Thou hast brought us the signs of Spring
Thou hast made our sad hearts gay.

Descend, O Stork! descend
Upon our roof to rest;
In our ash-tree, O my friend,
My darling make thy nest.

To thee, O Stork, I complain,
O Stork, to thee I impart
The thousand sorrows, the pain
And aching of my heart.

When thou away didst go,
Away from this tree of ours,
The withering winds did blow,
And dried up all the flowers.

Dark grew the brilliant sky,
Cloudy and dark and drear;
They were breaking the snow on high,
And winter was drawing near.

From Varaca's rocky wall,
From the rock of Varaca unrolled,
The snow came and covered all,
And the green meadow was cold.

O Stork, our garden with snow
Was hidden away and lost,
And the rose-trees that in it grow
Were withered by snow and frost.

CULTURE OF RUBARB.

This wholesome plant is growing yearly in public favor; the sale has increased to such an extent that it is not uncommon to see an acre of it in a single patch among the market gardeners who send daily at this season whole loads to market.

The culture is simple, but two things being essential—clean culture and plenty of manure. The land should be a deep loam, that does not suffer from drouth; a rather moist soil suits it, but does not bring the crop so early as a lighter location. The land should have been thoroughly cleaned from all foul weeds and couch grass by thorough tillage, and after clearing the summer crops we usually plant the rhubarb in November, just before the land freezes.

A good dressing of manure is plowed in, furrows are stuck out four feet asunder, and more manure placed in the drill; the two manurings should not be less than 12 cords per acre. The roots from an old bed are dug up and divided so as to leave one or two strong buds on each piece or set. The sets are planted in the drill three feet apart and covered about two inches with earth by the hoe. The next spring the plants will come up in May and will need one or two hoeings and cultivatings before the leaves cover the land, when nothing more need be done until the frost kills the leaves. No stalks should be pulled for use during this year. After the frost has killed the leaves the one-horse plow is run between the rows, turning a light furrow from the roots, making a ridge between the rows; these furrows are half filled with strong manure, which is covered by splitting the ridge with the plow. The next spring we begin to pull as soon as the stalks are six inches high, selecting only a few of

LANCHE. A VOICE FROM THE LADIES' GALLERY—
MINISTER OF MILITIA AWAKES
THE ATTENTION OF THE INFANTRY—AN AMUSING SCENE IN THE
HOUSE OF COMMONS.

Last week an intensely dry debate took place in the House on the Representation Bill which would have been totally devoid of interest to the occupants of the galleries, but for an incident that occurred about 9:30 o'clock. Mr. Workman had concluded a long winded and somewhat violent speech advocating the right of the Protestant minority of Montreal to representation in the Commons, and protesting annexing Griffintown to his constituency. To his arguments Sir George Cartier rose to reply, and was answering the hon. member for Montreal Centre in a somewhat forcible style when, in the middle of his speech, an infant, which had been brought to the gallery by its mother, set up a howl like a small steam-whistle. At first it was thought to be an invention of a "silent member" anxious to put a stop to the debate. But as the squalls continued, all eyes were directed to a particular part of the Ladies Gallery there was no mistaking the sound as a genuine Simon Pure article, the cry of a lusty infant, awakened by the powerful arguments of the Minister of Militia. The roars of laughter that followed the baby's maiden speech were deafening. Some of the members cried "Hear! hear!" Others gave the young orator an encore. Sir George reddened; the ladies blushed; and the House was completely demoralized for a moment. In the midst of it all, the Minister of Militia stopped short in his speech, and Mr. Holton's deep and powerful voice was heard to exclaim, "Put down for once," alluding to Sir George Cartier.

Sir George heard him, turned him like a flash, and bending toward him with an enquiring look, said, "I think I heard the hon. member for Chateauguay say 'Put down for once' did I?" Mr. Holton—Yes; I said the hon. gentlemen was put down for once.

Sir George Cartier—Yes, I was put down for once. I did not know but what it was the "little devil" to which my hon. friend from Montreal Centre alluded a short time ago (referring to an expression made use of a short time previous by Mr. Workman, who said he would defend the rights of his constituents, "in spite of the devil")

MY FIRST FURNISHING.

A few years ago the agreeable duty devolved upon me for the first time, of furnishing my home. Bachelorhood and lodgings had been my lot. I was now, as Lord Palmerston was wont to say, "upon my promotion." The means at my disposal were not large—only a few hundred pounds—and I had never bought an article of furniture in my life: I was glad to put myself under the guidance of a friend who was well up in such matters, and who at once consented to give me his best assistance.

I told him my plans; how I had thought of having my drawing-room furnished of walnut, the dining-room of mahogany, and the library of oak; how I intended to dispose of this article and that, and the other, and to fill up the corners with such and such knick-knacks and addenda.

"The less furniture you have," he interposed sententiously, "the better."

"Yes," he said, "the less to clean, and to mend, and to pay for."

"But," I rejoined, "don't you think there should be a certain amount of the ornamental as well as the useful?" "Ah!" he returned, "ornamental is all very well, but use first, and remember," he added "ornamental gives unlevel surfaces, and gathers dust, and wants dusting—more dusting than servants give nowadays, and you'd better have things plain and clean, than ornamental and dirty. There, the back of those chairs can be dusted in a second, and that's the reason I chose the pattern, and I should advise you to buy something of the same kind."

I confess I was somewhat taken aback. Such views of the matter I certainly had never had, and had never heard. But I listened with interest.

"Now, there is another little matter," he said, "I would mention. You're going to buy a dinner and tea-service; I'll tell you how people generally go to work, and what comes of it. They say to themselves, 'we must have one handsome set for company, something for highdays and holidays, something which will make people see, when they come to dinner, how genteel we are. Then, of course, we must have another set to save that; a common set that will do for every day, and when we haven't company.' So they buy the two. And what is the consequence? No doubt when Mr. and Mrs. Smith, and Mr. and Mrs. Jones sit down to dinner, they are deeply impressed by our gentility in general, and by the green and gold in particular; a sentiment, which however, is perhaps somewhat chastened by a inkling of what a bother we must have had to get up all this show and how many private shabbinesses there will be to compensate for all the expense. After the frost has killed the leaves the one-horse plow is run between the rows, turning a light furrow from the roots, making a ridge between the rows; these furrows are half filled with strong manure, which is covered by splitting the ridge with the plow. The next spring we begin to pull as soon as the stalks are six inches high, selecting only a few of the best on each hill; after a few days we pull again, and about June 10th, or just before strawberries and gooseberries begin to spoil the sale, we pull all the leaves off clean, and immediately run the cultivator and hoe. The aftergrowth is allowed to grow and shade the land, and after the frost has killed the leaves the manuring should be repeated as above described every year. The bed will need plowing between the rows and hoeing early in the spring, as soon as the leaves are up. A plantation is good for about five years, when it should be dug up and reset: if allowed to stand longer, the hills spread about too much, making a great number of small stalks, increasing the labor of tying up for market. Foul weeds, sorrel and couch grass will often work in too, so that an old bed is usually unprofitable after five years.

The only kind planted for market here is the Victoria, as it is very much the best kind, producing enormous stalks, often 8 oz. each, and 3½ feet long. The product is truly astonishing, amounting to forty tons to the acre on well-kept beds, and although it sells often for ten dollars per ton when plenty, and requires considerable labor to prepare it for market, the crop is sure, and it is fairly profitable. A dozen hills will suffice for any common family.

The plant is one that more surely than almost any returns, thankfully liberal applications of the strongest kinds of manure, and suffers immediately from neglect. When only a few hills are to be cared for in the garden, the earth should be dug away from the crown of the plant in the fall, and the excavation filled up with manure; the result will appear the next spring.

Rhubarb is easily forced, so as to be in condition to pull in February and March. The roots should be selected for forcing from a young plantation, that will be sure to throw good large stalks; they should be dug up in November and placed under cover in a cool cellar or pit for forcing rhubarb. It needs little or no light, and a temperature only a little above freezing; a cellar having a furnace in it for heating the house will answer well, and give a supply sufficient for the wants of a family; the roots are placed on a bed of six inches of horse manure, boards placed around them, and covered over with two inches of rich loam. The loam should be watered and kept constantly moist. After forcing, the roots are so exhausted that they are worthless for field planting, and should be thrown away. Forced rhubarb usually sells for good prices, ranging from ten to twenty cents per pound.—Country Gentleman.

It will cure insanity. It will restore to vigor an over-worked brain. It will build up and make strong a weary body. It will do much to cure dyspepsia, particularly that variety known as nervous dyspepsia. It will relieve fatigue and prostrations felt by consumptives. It will cure hypochondria. It will cure the blues. It will cure headache. It will cure neuralgia. It will cure a broken spirit. It will cure a broken spirit. It will cure sorrow. Indeed we might make a list of numerous maladies that sleep will cure."

The cure of sleeplessness, however is not so easy, particularly in those who carry heavy responsibilities. The habit of sleeping well is one which, if broken up for any length of time, is not easily regained. Often a severe illness treated by powerful drugs, so deranges the nervous system that sleep is never sleep—is never sweet afterward. Or, perhaps, long continued watchfulness produces the same effect; or hard study, or too little exercise of the muscular system, or tea and whisky drinking, and tobacco using. To break up the habit are required:

1st. A good clean bed. 2nd. Sufficient exercise to produce weariness, pleasant occupations. 3rd. Good air and too warm a room. 4th. Freedom from too much care. 5th. A clear stomach. 6th. A clear conscience. 7th. Avoidance of stimulants and narcotics.

For those who are overworked, haggard, nervous, who pass sleepless nights, we commend the adoption of such habits as will secure their sleep, otherwise life will be short, and what there is of it will be sadly imperfect.

are deeply impressed by our gentility in general, and by the green and gold in particular; a sentiment, which however, is perhaps somewhat chastened by an inkling of what a bother we must have had to get up all this show and how many private shabbinesses there will be to compensate for all the expense. At length our guests take their departure and host and hostess sit down in their several arm chairs, glad of a little quiet, to congratulate each other that the affair is over; and then after many cross looks and perhaps some cross words, all the grandeur is washed again, and dried again, and put away and the tired mistress and maids get to their beds, to rest their limbs and to sweeten their tempers.

"Now, to avoid all this, take my advice. One of the great shames of the present day is, that people have not the manliness to confess to being what they really are, but will try to ape those who have more money than themselves. You are going to-morrow morning to get your crockery, glass, and cutlery. My advice is, go in for what is straightforward, simple and honest. But a good wholesome, respectable article; no more costly than you can afford, and not so shabby that you will be ashamed to set it before your friends. Then, when you want to exercise your hospitality, you will only have to put a few more plates and glasses and knives and forks, upon your table; you will make your friends whose opinion is worth twopence all the happier, because they see that you are not afraid to be real, and you will enjoy their company all the more, because their visit is unalloyed by a sense that the trouble they have given is any more than you and your husband could reasonably and cheerfully undergo."

I am not ashamed to confess that that conversation not only modified my plans in regard to my first furnishing, but has influenced my views and actions in other matters.

The fact is, I do believe that thousands among us are the servants of their clothes or horses, instead of those things serving them. Instead of their property ministering to their comfort, the great employment of their time and thoughts is how to take care of their property. The man with £500 a year tries to make his neighbor think he has £1,000; while his neighbor, with £1,000 a year is practicing all sorts of little expedients to persuade the rest of us that he has £2,000.—London Christian Times.

EDUCATIONAL ITEMS.

HALLS AND SCHOOL ROOMS.—While sulphurous acid, chloride of lime and carbonate of lime cannot be used without inconvenience, on account of their unpleasant odor, in frequented rooms, chemical science has recently brought out a disinfectant apparently more effective than either, which can be safely and conveniently used anywhere, since it is free from odor, and when properly diluted does no harm to the color or texture of carpets or furniture. This is bromo-chloralum. We did it not be worth while, as a sanitary measure occasionally to sprinkle the floors of our school rooms, churches and other assembly rooms with it? If this were done at the close of a session, the air, instead of being kept in its foul condition until the next gathering, would be cleansed of its impurities. If the sprinkling

At a literary society, composed of colored folks, at Memphis, Tennessee, the question as to which is the most desirable travelling, by steamboat or rail, was discussed with much interest on each side. At the close of the discussion calls were made for "volunteer speeches." An old darkey with great dignity mounted the rostrum, and with a look of extremity wisdom, addressed the audience thus:—

"Ladies and gentlemen, if you're on de steamboat, and de biler busts, whar is you? And if you're on de kars, and de engine runs off de track, dar you is?"

"Sir," said a fierce barrister, "do you, on your solemn oath, swear that this is not your hand-writing?"

"I think not," was the cool reply.

"Does it resemble your writing?"

"No, sir, I think it don't."

"Do you swear that it don't resemble your writing?"

"Well, I do."

"You take your solemn oath that this writing does not resemble yours in a single letter?"

"Yes, sir."

"Now how do you know?"

"Cause I can't write."

A certain French gentleman, having been but a very little while in England, was invited to a friend's house, when a large bowl of punch was made—a liquor he had never seen before, and which did not at all agree with him. Having forgot the name of it, he asked a person the next day.

"What dey call dat liquor in England which is all de contradiction—where is de brandy to make it strong, and de vater to make it weak, de sugar to make it sweet, and de lemons to make it sour?"

"Punch," answered the other, "I suppose you mean?"

"Ay, punch!" cried monsieur, "it almost punched my brain out last night."

rows and hoeing early in the spring, as soon as the leaves are up. A plantation is good for about five years, when it should be dug up and reset; if allowed to stand longer, the hills spread about too much, making a great number of small stalks, increasing the labor of tying up for market. Foul weeds, sorrel and couch grass will often work in too, so that an old bed is usually unprofitable after five years.

The only kind planted for market here is the Victoria, as it is very much the best kind, producing enormous stalks, often 8 oz. each, and 3½ feet long. The product is truly astonishing, amounting to forty tons to the acre on well-kept beds, and although it sells often for ten dollars per ton when plenty, and requires considerable labor to prepare it for market, the crop is sure, and it is fairly profitable. A dozen hills will suffice for any common family.

The plant is one that more surely than almost any returns, thankfully liberal applications of the strongest kinds of manure, and suffers immediately from neglect. When only a few hills are to be cared for in the garden, the earth should be dug away from the crown of the plant in the fall, and the excavation filled up with manure; the result will appear the next spring.

Rhubarb is easily forced, so as to be in condition to pull in February and March. The roots should be selected for forcing from a young plantation, that will be sure to throw good large stalks; they should be dug up in November and placed under cover in a cool cellar or pit for forcing rhubarb. It needs little or no light, and a temperature only a little above freezing; a cellar having a furnace in it for heating the house will answer well, and give a supply sufficient for the wants of a family; the roots are placed on a bed of six inches of horse manure, boards placed around them, and covered over with two inches of rich loam. The loam should be watered and kept constantly moist. After forcing, the roots are so exhausted that they are worthless for field planting, and should be thrown away. Forced rhubarb usually sells for good prices, ranging from ten to twenty cents per pound.—Country Gentleman.

CHEAP LABOR IN GARDENING.—We make a seasonal suggestion to young gardeners, on the best mode of keeping clean grounds, and raising good crops, at little cost. Novices commonly allow weeds to get several inches high before they think of clearing them out and destroying them. Now, the great secret of cheap and successful culture is to kill all weeds before they come up. Go over the bare surface of earth as often as once a week, and pulverize it thoroughly with a rake or skin-hoe. This will kill every weed just as it is starting, with less than one-tenth the labor required to kill them when several inches high. Do it often and thoroughly.

Endeavor to keep your conscience always soft and sensitive. If but one sin force its way in that tender part of the soul, and is suffered to dwell there, the road is paved for a thousand iniquities.

THAT FEARFUL ACCIDENT.

BETWEEN THIRTY AND FORTY DEAD.

(From the Daily Ontario.)

The fearful railroad catastrophe that occurred near this place on Saturday morning continues to be the absorbing matter of interest. The first impression of the occurrence, although bad enough, utterly failed to convey to the public mind the enormity of the casualty. Six killed and fifty or sixty wounded embraced the simple fact; but the final result will most probably reverse the horrible record and leave the public the sickening consideration that fifty or sixty human lives have been sacrificed by the most mysterious railroad accident that has ever happened in this or any other country. No human skill could devise means of torture so complete as no ingenuity can comprehend the extraordinary facts that led to the immolation.

It appears that the engine left the track about 300 feet before it came to the place of the catastrophe, which was near the entrance to the bridge, where there was an embankment of some ten or twelve feet. After leaving the track it ran along on the rails without diverging from the regular course (the road at the point being perfectly straight) more than ten inches or a foot. The train was running at this point by its own momentum for it was going down a considerable grade and would even at that have been under considerable speed. The theory that seems most natural is that at this point, knowing the danger of entering upon the bridge with the engine off the track at the speed at which he was travelling, the engineer reversed the engine at full power, the result of which was, owing to the confliction of power—from the engine at one end of the train and the momentum at the other—to throw the "caboose" and back wheels of the engine from the embankment in a lateral direction to the east side, followed immediately by the fore part of the engine which with a bound must have gone forward and landed firmly, with the wheels and bottom part of the engine downward and the top of the boiler with the double-gauge and the steam whistle between, which were on the steam box, pointing directly towards the track, and although quite clear of it, near enough to tear two-thirds of the side of the on-coming second-class car, in which were the unfortunate passengers, clear out. The baggage car, strange to relate, jumped from the track to the west side, and passed quite out of the way. The side of the second-class car, coming in contact with the top of the boiler, as related, tore from it the two the floor for some hours until a short time before his death, with a billet of wood nearly a foot long thrust up the calf of his leg—quite unaware of the fact. Another young man who spent most of the day in sympathizing with his comrades apparently without the least apprehension of being injured has since died or will ultimately die, from a severe scald in the centre of the back between the shoulder-blades, which was only discovered after the day was nearly spent almost from accident. The flesh appears to have been so completely boiled as to render it insensible to feeling. But perhaps the saddest case of all was that of the family Callender, from Kemptville. This family consisted of father, mother, and three children, all of whom are now in their coffins. The mother's first thought, forgetting or unmindful of her own anguish, was of her children. One of the little ones was dead at her feet, and the others so badly burned as to be helpless. During the day they all died except a most beautiful little girl who lived until Sunday morning, conscious to the last and watchful of every thing going on about her. She finally succumbed to the fate awaiting her. The last few moments of her life was spent in humming the little Hymns she had learned in her Sabbath School, touching deeply the sympathies of all who were present. Later in the day the only member of the family left—a son—arrived at the Station from his home in Kemptville, only to find that death had done its perfect work. In another case a wife and her husband placed in different parts of the building, and a son in still another part. Their deep anxiety for each other was soon manifested, and after considerable delay they were brought together and recognized each other by their voices—the son actually rising from his cot to bid his mother good-bye, telling her that she would go first, but that he would follow soon. Alas, the prediction was too true. Brothers were anxious about brothers, and many were anxious about the affliction the casualty would convey to their friends.

As was stated before the greater number of those injured were French Canadians, some fifteen of whom were in the employ of Rathbun & Son, Mill Point. They were returning from the Shanties and the 'Drive' and had the day before been paid off. They are spoken of as being a superior lot of men—for the most part sober and industrious. Some of these men had a large amount of money with them at the time of the occurrence; but it is supposed most of it is safe, because early efforts were made to that end. There were also a large number of the same class of men from Orillia, en route to their homes for their summer vacation. The language of the unfortunates and the wide extent of country from which they came renders it almost impossible to obtain names and addresses, a correct list of which has not yet been secured. The same causes also prevent communication with friends, and consequently thus far but few of the dead have been claimed and the recognized among the sufferers still remaining have been even fewer still in proportion and very difficult. Among the 38 remaining at the Station yesterday afternoon under the care of citizens and Grand Trunk

At 5 o'clock the jury proceeded to the scene of the disaster just below Shannonville. They made a careful examination of the rails where the engine left the track—the condition of the wheels of the engine &c., so as to be prepared for the most complete and thorough investigation. The authorities of the Grand Trunk seem anxious to afford every facility in their power for ascertaining the cause of the accident. At the wreck Mr. Spicer, the superintendent of the road, met the jury. The jury returned to Belleville about 7 o'clock p. m. and adjourned until 9 o'clock this morning. On Saturday night a great many of our citizens volunteered their services as nurses. At nine o'clock there was thirty-nine wounded in the freight shed. Drs. Tracy, Stewart and Clapham were in attendance during the night. About ten o'clock order was given for all persons to leave the shed. A great many had been attracted there by the curiosity and were in the way of those who were attempting to relieve the suffering of the wounded at an early hour of the night. The duties of the nurses and attendants were so systematized that there was no confusion during the night. All worked with a hearty good will, and where all did so well it would be useless to particularize. There was a number of persons present who spoke French, whose services were in constant requisition. We learn that during the night two persons died, one of these little Mary Callender, who had won the hearts of all who saw her by her patient, quiet endurance. A lady who was nursing her informed us during the night, she was often speaking of her childish plays and games and calling for her mother. She repeated several parts of hymns she had learned in the Sunday School, one particularly struck us—"A friend is ever near, never far." Death released the poor little one from her sufferings about three o'clock Sunday morning, and she is doubtless now with that "Friend" she had learned to love so well. We are informed at times during the night it was painful to hear the exclamation of the sufferers when it was necessary to move them or dress their wounds. The French Canadians would often cry out "Mon Dieu! Mon Dieu!" in a most pitiful manner, touching the stoutest hearts.

The officers and employees of the Road have done all in their power to help in taking care of the wounded. Mr. Spicer, Supt., Mr. Jno. Bell, Solicitor, and Mr. Lyuskey, the Agent, are untiring in their labours. Mr. Brydges arrived by a special train on Sunday afternoon at 7 o'clock.

We learn that the following wounded were removed from a farm house near the scene of the accident, on Sunday afternoon to the hospital in Belleville:—Xavier Chabot,—Quebec; Oliver La-Flamme—a Wine Merchant. He was a passenger in the first-class car and had gone forward to smoke when the accident occurred: Mr. Anderson, from Trenton; Mr. McLellan,—Glengarry. The two last were not so seriously injured as the others. There are two still remaining at Shaw's Hotel, in Shannonville: Mr. Aunger, from Trenton, who in addition to his burn has several ribs broken; Mr. Cherette, from Gatineau Point. They have been under the medical care of Dr. Campbell of Shannonville, aided by Dr. Clapham. Mr. D. Harper, of Belleville, was assiduous in his attentions to the wounded at Shannonville. The corpse of Moses Chabot, who died on Sunday, was brought to Belleville. He was a native of Montreal, aged 19 years.

At Kingston there are Israel Lalonde, Coteau; Joseph Pelon, do; Chancey Gilchrist, Clayton, New York; H. Pelon, Coteau, who all

LABOR MOVEMENT IN ENGLAND.

The labor movement in England, whatever be its merits in this country, will excite the sympathy of the humanitarian world over. From time immemorial, if the British Empire dates back contemporaneously to that antiquity, labor has been oppressed in that country. To be born in the laboring classes was to be doomed to perpetual slavery, including many of its most loathsome features, embracing insufficient food, insufficient clothing, ignorance and perpetual drudgery, from the cradle to the grave, without hope in the future for themselves or for their families. So debased are the laboring classes, that the only wonder is that they have ambition enough left to initiate, (which they probably did not do,) or co-operate in an effort to better their condition. But the movement has been made, by whomsoever commenced, and a philanthropic class of people are assisting in the good work, and it has been wisely commenced and is being judiciously pushed forward. The course pursued among farm laborers is to peacefully quit their present service and seek better remuneration in emigration, either to America or the Northern or other parts of England, where the pay is better. This course is being strenuously opposed by the employing at the other—to throw the "caboose" and back wheels of the engine from the embankment in a lateral direction to the east side, followed immediately by the fore part of the engine which with a bound must have gone forward and landed firmly, with the wheels and bottom part of the engine downward and the top of the boiler whistle between, which were on the steam box, pointing directly towards the track, and although quite clear of it, near enough to tear two-thirds of the side of the on-coming second-class car, in which were the unfortunate passengers, clear out. The baggage car, strange to relate, jumped from the track to the west side, and passed quite out of the way. The side of the second-class car, coming in contact with the top of the boiler, as related, tore from it the two guages above referred to and the whistle, through the apertures in which the steam and water from the boiler played with relentless fury on the defenceless passengers. There they were, confined by the west side of the car, which was left intact, with two-thirds of the east side torn out, and these three nozzles belching forth superheated steam and boiling water, (two of them three inch pipes and the other one inch), dealing out to the powerless humanity thus bound to the slaughter, excruciating torments and ultimate death. No earthly power could come quick enough to the rescue. In one minute from the terrible blow the contents of the boiler was dashed over their writhing flesh to the last quart. It is said that the hanging side of the car was so disposed as to double the compass of the wide reaching nozzles, and place nearly every passenger in the car under their influence. But what mortal hands could do was at once done as soon as the situation was realized. Crow-bars were used, the west side of the car was broken open, and those not already dead were hurried into the Pullman-car and as fast as possible brought to this station. The scene that met the eye when the escaping steam had sufficiently cleared away to admit a survey of the position was beyond description. The Engineer was found near his engine in the last agonies of death, the brakeman hobbled from his fall with a crushed limb, and the 65 passengers, with bare one exception, were nearly all writhing and screeching in the deepest anguish. Some of the unfortunate creatures crawled from the place of their immolation over the heated surface of the boiler, others remained behind, forgetting their own pains. In search of friends, and others whose sensibilities was keenest, lost control of themselves and were got into the car with great difficulty. In the confusion eight of the victims was left at Shanonville, distributed at the hotels and at farm houses, and over fifty were brought to Belleville and deposited on cots and mattresses in the freight shed. Here the physicians of the Town, without an exception, were busy dressing the wounds. But as might be expected, the amount of medical stores for such an event were not at once procurable. In all the drug-stores no more than half a gallon of lime-water could be procured;

ing from the Shanties and the "Drive" and had the day before been paid off. They are spoken of as being a superior lot of men—for the most part sober and industrious. Some of these men had a large amount of money with them at the time of the occurrence; but it is supposed most of it is safe, because early efforts were made to that end. The same causes also prevent communication with friends, and consequently thus far but few of the dead have been claimed and the recognized among the sufferers still remaining have been even fewer still in proportion and very difficult. Among the 38 remaining at the Station yesterday afternoon under the care of citizens and Grand Trunk officials it was almost impossible for a young man to find his brother. Their faces, in most cases, are disfigured beyond identification; most of them are scarcely able to articulate and not a few are quite blind from the scalding and the swelling that ensued. A more wretched sight than the unfortunates presented was, perhaps, seldom witnessed. Hands bound in lime water and oil, faces besmeared with the same substance, bloated and blackened or bleached and hideous, they look less like human beings than men as they were stretched throughout the large freight shed wherever a cot could be crowded in among the freight. Here the writer saw them at three o'clock on Sunday. They were then comparatively quiet, and several were taking sparingly of ice cream and other cooling refreshments. Only one man of the entire number was able to walk around, although the majority of them the day before was able to be about and make known their requests. Up to that time twenty seven were dead from the occurrence, nearly all of whom had been confined. Some of the poor creatures still groaned in agony and others had evidently passed the stage of suffering and were slowly hastening towards final dissolution. The opinion of the medical men then in attendance was that not more than half a dozen of all that number would recover. Their external wounds were not so serious as their internal injuries. The majority of them had taken the scalding steam into their lungs and but few of those in that condition could possibly live long. It was with the utmost difficulty that the thousands of people who thronged the station on every side could be kept from the building. Door keepers were vigilant and physicians unyielding, and by dint of great firmness the curiosity seekers were kept outside and comparatively out of the way. During the day arrangements were made to remove the sufferers to a building on Taylor's hill owned and formerly occupied by the Roman Catholics as a Convent. It is a fine building, in a most healthy part of the town and every way adapted to the purpose. The Rev. Mr. Farrelley gave permission to occupy this building, John Bell, Esq., to have control of it, and all the medical men to have access under the direction of Dr. Hope, the senior medical man of the place. About four o'clock the removal commenced and in a couple of hours the whole number (with

THE INQUEST.
An inquest was convened on Saturday by Coroner Burdett, associated with Coroner Roy, which was in session as we went to press. It was shown that the train was only making usual speed (25 miles an hour) and that it was slackened at Shanonville station. The character of the engineer was also proved to be most exemplary, and the opinion was expressed that no human power could account for the breaking of the flange that caused the accident.
There are now twenty-five wounded in the Convent building, several of whom appear better.
A number of unclaimed bodies were today deposited in the Roman Catholic Cemetery.

The course pursued among farm laborers is to peacefully quit their present service and seek better remuneration in emigration, either to America or the Northern or other parts of England, where the pay is better. This course is being strenuously opposed by the employing classes, and an instance is given in which the Rev. Edward Girdlestone, Canon of Bristol, has been severely reprimanded for the part he took in the matter. "It appears that a farm laborer, named John Webber, having a wife and family, was going to remove to Lancashire, where Canon Girdlestone had obtained a situation for him. He had sold his household furniture, and was about to start, when he was arrested on a warrant at the suit of his master, a farmer named White, on plea of a breach of contract. He was afterwards liberated on bail, but was bound to appear at the petty sessions a week afterwards. He did so, and of the magistrates on the bench, one, the chairman, had granted the warrant; and another was the landlord of the prosecutor, White, who sued the laborer. The remaining two were landed proprietors in an adjoining parish, from which many laborers, much against the will of both landlords and tenants, had emigrated. No proof of a yearly contract was made out, however, or if there had been such a contract it had evidently been voluntarily terminated by the farmer. Webber in reality seems to have been little else than a weekly servant. But the presiding magistrate seems throughout to have acted the part of an advocate rather than a judge, and fined him £2, with costs. A gentleman in court advanced the money, and Webber with his wife and family wended his way to Lancashire to earn wages out of which to repay it. But the drama was not yet played out. No sooner was the sentence pronounced than the presiding magistrate addressing Canon Girdlestone, began publicly to reprimand him for sending laborers away to better wages. The Canon vehemently protested against being thus talked to, as though he were the prisoner, and a stormy scene ensued; and the magistrate appealed to the audience, which was composed partly of farmers, but more largely of townspeople and laborers, as to whether he should go on. The farmers cried "Yes," and the laborers "No," and the court

The Engineer was found near his engine in the last agonies of death, the breakman hobbled from his fall with a crushed limb, and the 65 passengers, with bare one exception, were nearly all writhing and screeching in the deepest anguish. Some of the unfortunate creatures crawled from the place of their immolation over the heated surface of the boiler, others remained behind, forgetting their own pains, in search of friends, and others whose sensibilities was keenest, lost control of themselves and were got into the car with great difficulty. In the confusion eight of the victims was left at Shannonville, distributed at the hotels and at farm houses, and over fifty were brought to Belleville and deposited on cots and mattresses in the freight shed. Here the physicians of the Town, without an exception, were busy dressing the wounds. But as might be expected the amount of medical stores for such an event were not at once procurable. If all the drug-stores no more than half a gallon of lime-water could be procurable; but still the efforts that could be made were hastily put in requisition and in a few hours everything the medical men desired were at their hands in abundance. Ladies and gentlemen of the town were early on the spot and every assistance that could possibly be afforded the victims have since been put forth. But the hearts of the stoutest of them quailed under the awful sight that presented itself. Flesh and blood could never have been subjected to a greater test, whether as to victims or to the nurses who were compelled to tear the clothing from the boiled and softened flesh of each one in turn that came under their hands. As each victim was dressed he was put to rest with opium, or as nearly so as was thought advisable; but this powerful narcotic was in many cases apparently powerless to induce sleep. After a short time, men with not an inch of unburned surface on their bodies walked the floor in comparative indifference, and in some instances talked rationally to those administering to their sufferings. Some wanted friends, others again their clothing, others had missed their money (which had been removed from their pockets by the railway authorities to secure it from loss), and not a few who an hour after were in the last agonies of death, desired to take the train again for home, apparently quite oblivious of their sad condition. One man paced tively quiet, and several were taking sparingly of ice cream and other cooling refreshments. Only one man of the entire number was able to walk around, although the majority of them the day before was able to be about and make known their requests. Up to that time twenty seven were dead from the occurrence, nearly all of whom had been confined. Some of the poor creatures still groaned in agony and others had evidently passed the stage of suffering and were slowly hastening towards final dissolution. The opinion of the medical men then in attendance was that not more than half a dozen of all that number would recover. Their external wounds were not so serious as their internal injuries. The majority of them had taken the scalding steam into their lungs and but few of those in that condition could possibly live long.

It was with the utmost difficulty that the thousands of people who thronged the station on every side could be kept from the building. Door keepers were vigilant and physicians unyielding, and by dint of great firmness the curiosity seekers were kept outside and comparatively out of the way.

During the day arrangements were made to remove the sufferers to a building on Taylor's hill owned and formerly occupied by the Roman Catholics as a Convent. It is a fine building, in a most healthy part of the town and every way adapted to the purpose. The Rev. Mr. Farrelley gave permission to occupy this building, John Bell, Esq., to have control of it, and all the medical men to have access under the direction of Dr. Hope, the senior medical man of the place. About four o'clock the removal commenced and in a couple of hours the whole number (with bare one exception) had been carefully conveyed in spring wagons to their new quarters, each cot being lifted bodily into the vehicle. The horse was then led over the smoothest road, and with the greatest care, to the prepared quarters. This sad duty was performed with great caution and tenderness, and it is believed that not one of them suffered from the removal. The man left behind was supposed to be dying, and hence he was not disturbed; but we learn that he survived the night and still lived at last accounts. A train was also despatched to Shannonville, in charge of Dr. Palmer, of the Deaf and Dumb Institute, for those remaining there, and at about ten o'clock five were brought in from that place—leaving two who were comfortably provided for at that place at Shaw's Hotel.

The number brought to the Convent building was 29, of which four died last night, making the deaths in all at this point, according to the best information we can get, thirty-one.

Saturday afternoon at 5 o'clock the coroner, Dr. Burdett, summoned the following jury:—

THE INQUEST.

An inquest was convened on Saturday by Coroner Burdett, associated with Coroner Roy, which was in session as we went to press. It was shown that the train was only making usual speed (25 miles an hour) and that it was slackened at Shannonville station. The character of the engine was also proved to be most exemplary, and the opinion was expressed that no human power could account for the breaking of the flange that caused the accident.

There are now twenty-five wounded in the Convent building, several of whom appear better.

A number of unclaimed bodies were to-day deposited in the Roman Catholic Cemetery.

LATER.

We have the painful duty to record three more deaths.

Joseph Reanson, Vandrenil, at 4, a. m.

Robt. Pratt, Goulborne, near Ottawa, at 7.30, a. m.

Oliver Laflamme, of Montreal, at 10.30, a. m.

None died during the afternoon up to four o'clock, although several are evidently sinking and leave little hope of rallying. There are a number more, however, who appear quite better, some three or four of whom having obtained new clothing and been made presentable are comparatively comfortable.

The young man Pratt who died this morning was about 19 years of age. He was said to be thoughtful and intelligent. His struggle with the grim monster, even against hope, was long and pertinaciously endured; but the watchers at his side entertained little doubt of the final result from the first. His friends reached his couch previous to dissolution.

THE BURIAL.

There were eighteen unclaimed bodies depositing in the R. C. burial place last evening, and a number of bodies were packed in ice and despatched by train to their friends.

The Attorney General has instructed the Crown Attorney to open an inquest upon the next fatal case that may occur, and it is likely that fur-at the petty sessions a week afterwards. He did so, and of the magistrates on the bench, one, the chairman, had granted the warrant; and another was the landlord of the prosecutor, White, who sued the laborer. The remaining two were landed proprietors in an adjoining parish from which many laborers, much against the will of both landlords and tenants, had emigrated. No proof of a yearly contract was made out, however, or if there had been such a contract it had evidently been voluntarily terminated by the farmer. Webber in reality seems to have been little else than a weekly servant. But the presiding magistrate seems throughout to have acted the part of an advocate rather than a judge, and fined him £2, with costs. A gentleman in court advanced the money, and Webber with his wife and family wended his way to Lancashire to earn wages out of which to repay it. But the drama was not yet played out. No sooner was the sentence pronounced than the presiding magistrate addressing Canon Girdlestone, began publicly to reprimand him for sending laborers away to better wages. The Canon vehemently protested against being thus talked to, as though he were the prisoner, and a stormy scene ensued; and the magistrate appealed to the audience, which was composed partly of farmers, but more largely of townspeople and laborers, as to whether he should go on. The farmers cried "Yes," and the laborers "No," and the court seems to have been turned into a bear garden; but the "noes" had it by a large majority, and the magistrate was fain to sit down.

PRESCOTT CAMP.

The Volunteers of this Province are now in camp, and being drilled, at Niagara, Windsor, Kingston and Prescott. All told we believe there are something like 8000 volunteers in these four camps, and they are receiving some 14 days drill. Outside of that very little is now being done to prepare ourselves in the shape of military defence. We had an opportunity of visiting the camp at Prescott during this week and were much pleased with the appearance it presented. There are about 1,900 men in the encampment, and the hundreds of small tents, scattered over nearly a square mile of ground, together with the appearance of so many men in their bright uniforms, gives the place quite a military appearance. The camp is beautifully situated. Just to the eastern side of the town lies the old fort, yet in a fair state of preservation, and being th enough to the rescue. In one minute from the terrible blow the contents of the boiler was dashed over their writhing flesh to the last quart. It is said that the hanging side of the car was so disposed as to double the compass of the wide reaching nozzles, and place nearly every passenger in the car under their influence. But what mortal hands could do was at once done as soon as the situation was realized. Crow-bars were used, the west side of the car was broken open, and those not already dead were hurried into the Palman-car and as fast as possible brought to this station. The scene that met the eye when the escaping steam had sufficiently cleared away to admit a survey of the position was beyond description. The Engineer was found near his engine in the last agonies of death, the breakman hobbled from his fall with a crushed limb, and the 65 passengers, with bare one exception, were nearly all writhing and screeching in the deepest anguish. LABOR MOVEMENT IN ENGLAND.

The labor movement in England, whatever be its merits in this country, will excite the sympathy of the humanitarian world over. From time immemorial, if the British Empire dates back contemporaneously to that antiquity, labor has been oppressed in that country. To be born in the laboring classes was to be doomed to perpetual slavery, including many of its most loathsome features, embracing insufficient food, insufficient clothing, ignorance and perpetual drudgery, from the cradle to the grave, without hope in the future for themselves or for their families. So debased are the laboring classes, that the only wonder is that they have ambition enough left to initiate, (which they probably did not do,) or co-operate in an effort to better their condition. But the movement has been made, by whomsoever commenced, and a philanthropic class of people are assisting in the good work, and it has been wisely commenced and is being judiciously pushed forward. The course pursued among farm laborers is to peacefully quit their present service and seek better remuneration in emigration, either to America or the Northern or other parts of England, where the pay is better. This course is being strenuously opposed by the employing surrounded by a large open field there is abundant room for the encampment. It lies immediately on the banks of the St. Lawrence, giving it the advantage of the cool air and beautiful scenery, which is here truly admirable. Immediately to the west lies the town and front stretches the St. Lawrence of which a fine view is given for many miles. Immediately across lies Ogdensburgh, adding much to the beauty of the scene. Eastward, nearly two miles distant but in full view, stands the walls of the old Round Mill, and the walls of two of the buildings burned during the memorable invasion under Van Sholtz in 1837. These walls have been left remaining and stand as a land-mark in our Canadian history of one of the several futile attempts to "take Canada" that has been made by our Yankee neighbours. It will be remembered that a landing was effected here by the invaders and the windmill and some other buildings taken possession of after which it was calculated by Canadians would at once flock to their standard and the country would soon be separated from England. As in most other instances the plotters of the scheme remained on the safer side of the line and sent their dupes across to do the work and share the danger. In this instance they were taken prisoners and numbers of them paid the penalty of their crime by the sacrifice of their lives. Some seventeen houses were destroyed, but the ruined walls of only two new remain. The win-mill was not destroyed or burned at that time but has since gone into disuse and only the high thick walls may stand.

The appearance presented by the volunteers is excellent, and we should judge from what we saw of their daily drill, that they are making excellent progress in this respect. There are two companies of cavalry, the rest being footmen. The advantage of actual camp life, with a number of days continuous drill can easily be perceived. It is only to be regretted that over the whole country so few are being thus drilled.

Prescott, and most of the other old established towns along the St. Lawrence, have little of enterprise and progress so evident in ourselves and other towns to the west of us. It was among the earliest settled places in the Province and at one time held, relatively, an important military and commercial position. Though it has always continued to make progress yet it has by no means kept pace with many other places. The population is now nearly 3000. Few towns are so beautiful situated. Its streets and the residences of the more wealthy inhabitants give evidence of a taste and refinement unfortunately too rare among us as yet. The fine trees and beautiful work of

HORSE THIEF.—The young man, Smith, who stole a horse on Thursday night of last week, from Mr. Switzer, and which, owing to the diligence of our Chief of Police, was found at Odessa, the thief being previously arrested at his home on Roblin's Hill. He was brought to trial before His Worship the Mayor on Tuesday evening last and committed for trial

PROPOSED RAILWAY.—Picton, having taken up the spirit of the times, is agitating the desirability of building a branch railway to connect with the Grand Trunk at some convenient point, a large and influential meeting for that purpose being held there on Thursday, 20th ult, and a unanimous resolution was adopted expressing a desire to have the road, steps to secure which will be at once taken.

AT LAST.—Something is being done to clear away the obstructions that have so long been a hindrance to the navigation of the Napanee River. On Monday last, a Mr. Daly, of Ogdensburgh, N. Y., arrived here with his dredging machinery and commenced operations on the sand bars in the mouth of the river, for which he receives $100 per day.

PERSONAL.—We are pleased to be able to inform our readers that our townsman, Walter Exley, who was so severely injured in the railway accident of last Saturday, is now at home and is progressing favorably, his medical adviser pronouncing him out of danger.

—Kidd, the fireman on the ill-fated train, and whose leg had to be amputated at Belleville, is also likely to recover.

A FREE FIGHT.—On Wednesday evening last an interesting family brawl occurred at the west end of the town between Jim Simpson and wife and John Simmons. A large crowd of spectators assembled to witness the combat, much to their enjoyment. Quarrels are very frequent among these people, and blows and oaths of a frightful character are of a nightly occurrence. The police were on hand, to enjoy the sport, as usual, knowing there was no danger here, and succeeded in arresting Simpson, who was in a drunken state, and brought him to the lock-up.

PHOTOGRAPHING.—We direct attention to the advertisement of Mr. Canniff, in another column. He has lately purchased the Richardson gallery, and having made great improvements in his light, as well as secured the services of a First-Class Artist, the public will be safe in intrusting their orders to him. We have examined his pictures, of many different kinds, and have no hesitation in saying they are indeed got up in an artistic manner, and would advise all who want a correct representation of themselves to give him a call, he will be sure to please you.

FOOT RACE.—On Monday evening last a foot race of a 200 yards dash, for $100 a side, came off between given by the youngest of the three girls and who had not entered the water. She ran home, with the intelligence that she had spoken to the two other children in the water, and they would not answer her, having hid themselves beneath the surface. Miss Nancy Grange, to whom was imparted this information, at once rushed to the mill pond and brought out the dead bodies of the children, aged respectively five and nine years. Sad indeed was the occurrence, and the parents' avethe heartfelt sympathy of all citizens, for seldom or ever was two more beautiful children seen. A funeral sermon was preached at the W. M. Church on Sunday afternoon at five o'clock, the church being filled to its utmost capacity. The children of the Cold Water Temple attended in a body, each wearing a mourning badge on the left arm, the deceased having been members of that society, as well as the children of the Sabbath school in connection with the W. M. Church, all of whom seemed to realize, with a depth of feeling, the solemnity of the occasion. Their bodies were afterwards interred in the Vandebogart Cemetery.

ELOPEMENT IN HIGH LIFE.

The "Germania" which left the Hoboken dock last Saturday for Hamburg, carried with her a runaway bridal pair, connected with some of the best families on Long Island. An hour before the steamer sailed there dove on the pier a dilapidated country carriage, drawn by two horses, and with about an inch of dust on it, driven by a gaunt countryman.

The carriage stopped near the gangway. It had no baggage, nor anything to indicate that the occupants were going to Europe. Before the carriage had fairly stopped, the door was suddenly opened, and tall young man, about 28 years of age, stepped out. He was dressed in a black suit, which was concealed by a linen duster that came down below his knee. He wore a high hat, light kids, patent leather boots, and had in his hand a gold headed cane. His features were fair, and he had flowing side whiskers.

As he stepped out of the carriage he peered around with an anxious look. Apparently feeling reassured, he beckoned to the young lady in the carriage to come out. While the driver held the door the gallant assisted the lady out of the rattle box. She was a tall blonde of fine features, and had a very pleasant face. She was dressed in a light alpaca travelling suit, Dolly Varden hat, hair neatly braided, and carried a large brown parasol. She wore an anxious look, as if expecting every moment that her papa with a cowhide would have in sight. They hurried to the gangway, which they hastily crossed, and then descended to one of the saloons. There they seated themselves in an obscure corner.

Half an hour before the steamer started a thick set man with a sandy monotone, florid face, dressed in the height of the fashion, with a solitary diamond glistening on his shirt front, came up to Officer Kaiser and told him that he was a New York detective, and after a young man and woman whom he suspected were going to Europe, and asked the officer to arrest them. sufficient clothing, ignorance and perpetual drudgery, from the cradle to the grave, without hope in the future for themselves or for their families. So debased are the laboring classes, that the only wonder is that they have ambition enough left to initiate, (which they probably did not do,) or co-operate in an effort to better their condition. But the movement has been made, by whomsoever commenced, and a philanthropic class of people are assisting in the good work, and it has been wisely commenced and is being judiciously pushed forward. The course pursued among farm laborers is to peacefully quit their present service and seek better remuneration in emigration, either to America or the Northern or other parts of England, where the pay is better. This course is being strenuously opposed by the employing classes, and an instance is given in which the Rev. Edward Girdlestone, Canon of Bristol, has been severely reprimanded for the part he took in the matter. "It appears that a farm laborer, named John Webber, having a wife and family, was going to remove to Lancashire, where Canon Girdlestone had obtained a situation for him. He had sold his household furniture, and was about to start, when he was arrested on a warrant at the suit of his master, a farmer named White, on plea of a breach of contract. He was afterwards liberated on bail, but was bound to appear at the petty sessions a week afterwards. He did so, and of the magistrates on the bench, one, the chairman, had granted the warrant; and another was the landlord of the prosecutor, White, who sued the laborer. The remaining two were landed proprietors in an adjoining parish, from which many laborers, much against the will of both landlords and tenants, had emigrated. No proof of a yearly contract was made out, however, or if there had been such a contract it had evidently been voluntarily terminated by the farmer. Webber in reality seems to have been little else than a weekly servant. But the presiding magistrate seems throughout to have acted the part of an advocate rather than a judge, and fined him £2, with costs. A gentleman in court advanced the money, and Webber with his wife and family wended his way to Lancashire to earn wages out of which to repay it. But the drama was not yet played out. No sooner was the sentence pronounced than the presiding magistrate addressing Canon Girdlestone, began publicly to reprimand him for sending laborers away to better wages. The Canon vehemently protested against being thus talked to, as though he were the prisoner, and a stormy scene ensued; and the magistrate appealed to the audience, which was composed partly of farmers, but more largely of townspeople and laborers, as to whether he should go on. The farmers cried "Yes," and the laborers "No," and the court

Its streets and the residences of the more wealthy inhabitants give evidence of a taste and refinement unfortunately too rare among us as yet. The fine trees and beautiful yards of many inhabitants are much admired by all travellers. Being so near Ogdensburg there is much trade with that town. The ferry steamer, plying all day come general well laden with passengers, many of whom are ladies who seem inclined to do their shopping on this side. The fast lives, too, who wish to enjoy a spree are quite inclined to pay it a visit, as its whisky is said to be a much cheaper and purer article than can be procured among themselves. It is not therefore so much to be wondered at that in so small a town there should be something like 40 liquor shops, all of which seem to be driving considerable trade. There are also four distilleries and breweries, but beyond the particular branch of business there is not much being done in the shape of manufactures.

The business being done by railway here between the Ottawa country and United States is rapidly increasing, and greater facilities of intercommunication are needed. Recently a charter has been procured by building an iron railway bridge across the St. Lawrence here, but there is little probability that it will be speedily accomplished. The enquiring difficulties are not much, as the current here is not much, but the expense would be enormous, and it is doubtful whether trade has yet grown great enough to warrant so great an expenditure.

R. C. Pic-Nic.—We have not yet learned definitely what day has been fixed for the above Pic-Nic, but certain it is, when it does come off, it will be the Pic-Nic of the season. We will be in a position next week to give day and date.

CRICKET.—The Napanee Cricket Club beat the Mill Pointers on Monday last, in one innings by a majority of twelve runs.

POSTPONEMENT.—In consequence of the accident to the Maud, the excursion of the young people of the M. E. Church to Belleville, which was to have taken place on Wednesday last, takes place to-day.

CLOSING EXERCISES.—The closing exercises of the Napanee High School will take place at the Town Hall this afternoon, instead of at the school. Let all who can attend, as there will be a very interesting time.

FOOT RACE.—On Monday evening last a foot race of a 200 yards dash, for $100 a side, came off between W. Huff, of Napanee and Robert Kennedy, of Tamworth, the latter of whom is a man about 6 foot 2 inches in height and weighing upwards of 200 pounds, the former being but a very small man, but known to be fleet of foot. Never before have we seen a more exciting race, there being upwards of $800 bet upon it, the friends of both being confident of success. A large number of people were congregated to witness the race. The start was given, and both shot away like arrows, but it was very evident from there who was to be the winner, Kennedy displaying such agility as is seldom seen, and coming in ahead of his opponent, some distance, although his friends assert he did not half run.

PUBLIC DINNER.—As, doubtless, a large crowd of people will be attracted hither on Saturday, 6th July next, to witness the interesting ceremonies connected with the laying of the corner stone of the new M. E. Church, the Ladies Aid Society in connection therewith, and who have already done so much towards the erection of the new church, have decided to hold a public dinner at the Crystal Palace after the corner stone has been laid, and we know they will have everything that could be desired in the way of eatables. We trust their enterprise will be rewarded with success. There are many who have not as yet given anything towards the new church, and this will be an excellent opportunity for doing so, as but few will miss the price of a ticket, (One Dollar.)

THE DODGE SELF RAKE.—We direct attention to the advertisement in another column of the Dodge Mower and Self Rake manufactured by John Herring, Esq., of this town. This is, comparatively speaking, a new machine, and during the short time it has been in existence has so recommended itself to the farming community as to need no "puffing" at our hands. So great has been the demand for them that Mr. Herring has constantly in his employ upwards of 80 hands, constantly engaged in their manufacture. We think it to be to the interest of farmers to secure the very best machines for their agricultural pursuits, and in doing so, we would advise them to see the Dodge before purchasing any other kind. Orders are daily received for them from all parts of the Province, and as an evidence of their popularity we would just mention that upwards of 100 machines, have, at this early season of the year, been shipped to other places, irrespective of what has been sold to the farmers in the immediate vicinity.

The description the detective gave answered to that of the runaway couple.

Officer Kaiser asked the detective what the charge was against them, and said if he would be justified in making the arrest he would willingly do it. The detective refused to state the nature of the charge, so the officer refused to make an arrest, as he declared that he wanted to know for what cause he should arrest people. The wonderful detective left without making an arrest.

When the steamer had departed, Officer Kaiser went to the gaunt countryman, who was watching the noble vessel as she was swinging out into the stream, and questioned him about his late passengers. The countryman was very guarded in his answers. He would give no account of himself, but said he brought a young couple from Long Island, who had run away from home, and were married in New York. The groom's name was George Edward Brown, and the bride's Clara Louisa Smith, both belonging to some of the best families on Long Island. Early on Saturday, at an appointed time and place, they clandestinely met, and he carried them to New York, as they wished to avoid the cons. The carriage was heavily curtained, and in the morning he carried them to a minister up town where they were married. The minister received $20, 10 of which he gave him $5 as a commission.

At 1 o'clock the countryman was ordered to wait for them at Sixth avenue and Twenty-third street. After they had been made one, they went to the Fifth Avenue Hotel, where they took breakfast, and then went out shopping on Sixth avenue, but they were cautious about their movements. Their baggage had been shipped on Friday directly for Hapaburg.

They returned to Fifth Avenue Hotel, where they dined, and at the appointed hour they got into the carriage and were driven to Hoboken. The countryman got $25 for his job.

Shortly after the steamer sailed a fine carriage with prancing steeds, driven by a man in showy livery, came dashing on the pier. An elderly woman forced her head out of a window, and almost fainted when she discovered that the steamer had already sailed. Seeing officer Kaiser near by she called him, and asked him whether he saw a young lady go aboard the steamer, and then gave a description of her. The officer replied affirmatively, and added that

PRESCOTT CAMP.

The Volunteers of this Province are now in camp, and being drilled, at Niagara, Windsor, Kingston and Prescott. All told we believe there are something like 8000 volunteers in these four camps, and they are receiving some 14 days drill. Outside of that very little is now being done to prepare ourselves in the shape of military defence. We had an opportunity of visiting the camp at Prescott during this week and were much pleased with the appearance it presented. There are about 1,900 men in the encampment, and the hundreds of small tents, scattered over nearly a square mile of ground, together with the appearance of so many men in their bright uniforms, gives the place quite a military appearance. The camp is beautifully situated. Just to the eastern side of the town lies the old fort, yet in a fair state of preservation, and being among themselves. It is not therefore so much to be wondered at that in so small a town there should be something like 40 liquor shops, all of which seem to be driving considerable trade. There are also four distilleries and breweries, but beyond the particular branch of business there is not much being done in the shape of manufactures.

DREW'S MEDICAL VICTORY.—We last week secured a bottle of this excellent medicine, which is rapidly becoming celebrated, and having used the best part of it, we think it will do all it is recommended for.

ACCIDENT TO THE MAUD.—The steamer Maud, while on her way here from Picton on Tuesday last, broke her starting lever, and the steamer Rochester had to come to her assistance. She was then taken to Picton, and the broken lever sent to be repaired, and it is expected she will be on the route to-day.

At a meeting of the Trustees of the Cemetery Company on Tuesday evening last, the following officers were elected:—Wm. Caton, Esq., President; A. L. EAST HASTINGS.—This Riding is blessed beyond measure. No less than four Conservative candidates have announced themselves in the field, and it is known that several other gentlemen are "waiting for something to turn up" to put them before the electors—all on one side. And the other side, which ought to embrace full half of the Riding, has not yet been heard from. Mr. R. P. Jellet, Barrister, of this place, without the fear of Mr. John White or the Orangemen of the Riding, before his eyes, announces himself in the columns of a contemporary, last night. The address to the electors is promised as early as Monday, which will be first out in all the Dominion. How we would like to write that address, for so much depends on it and so little on the election.—"Daily Ontario."

SAD ACCIDENT.—Along with the news of the dreadful railway accident on Saturday last, our citizens were shocked on hearing the painful news that two little girls, daughters of John T. Grange, M. P. P., and his uncle, Thomas Grange, had been drowned in a mill pond about a mile from here, and near Mr. Grange's farm. It appears the children went down to the pond along with another little daughter of John T. Grange's, and after being there some time, proposed they should go in bathing, with the above disastrous result. The first intimation of the sad occurrence was given by the youngest of the three girls and who had not entered the water. She ran home, with the intelligence that she had spoken to the two other children in the water, and they would not answer her, having hid themselves beneath the surface. Miss Nancy Grange, to whom was imparted this information, at once rushed to the mill pond and brought out the dead bodies of the children, aged respectively five and nine years. Sad indeed was the occurrence, and the parents' avowed heartfelt sympathy of all citizens, for seldom or ever was two more beautiful children seen. A funeral sermon was preached at the W. M. Church on Sunday afternoon at five o'clock, the church being filled to its utmost capacity. The children of the Cold Water Temple attended in a body, each wearing a mourning badge on the left arm, the deceased having been members of that society, as well as the children of the Sabbath school in connection with the W. M. Church, all of whom seemed to realize, with a depth of feeling, the solemnity of the occasion. Their bodies were afterwards interred in the Vandebogart Cemetery.

What it costs to kiss a young lady in Cincinnati.

Rev. J. J. Thompson, formerly pastor of the Christie Methodist Episcopal Church, Cincinnati, but now of Leavenworth, Kansas, was assaulted lately by a man named Bond, who struck him with a batonet, inflicting three gashes on his head, one blow penetrating the cavity of the brain. It is thought that Mr. Thompson cannot survive his injuries. The parties cognizant of the circumstances of the affair are very reticent, but it is alleged that Mr. Thompson called at the house of a former member of his church, and on leaving, he took the liberty of kissing a young lady of his flock. This so enraged Baum, who is the young woman's lover, that he attacked Mr. Thompson with the result above stated. Baum has thus far eluded arrest.

ELOPEMENT IN HIGH LIFE.

The "Germania" which left the Hoboken dock last Saturday for Hamburg, carried with her a runaway bridal pair, connected with some of the best families on Long Island. An hour before the steamer sailed there drove on the pier a dilapidated country carriage, drawn by two horses, and with about an inch of dust on it, driven by a gaunt countryman.

The carriage stopped near the gangway. It had no baggage, nor anything to indicate that the occupants were going to Europe. Before the carriage had fairly stopped, the door was suddenly opened, and tall young man, about 28 years of age, stepped out. He was dressed in a black suit, which was concealed by a linen duster that came down below his knee. He wore a high hat, light kids, patent leather boots, and had in his hand a gold headed cane. His features were fair, and he had flowing side whiskers.

As he stepped out of the carriage he peered around with an anxious look. Apparently feeling reassured, he beckoned to the young lady in the carriage to come out. While the driver held the door the gallant assisted the lady out of the rattle box. She was a tall blonde of fine features, and had a very pleasant face. She was dressed in a light alpaca travelling suit, Dolly Varden hat, hair neatly braided, and carried a large brown parasol. She wore an anxious look, as if expecting every moment that her papa with a cowhide would leave in sight. They hurried to the gangway, which they hastily crossed, and then descended to one of the saloons. There they seated themselves in an obscure corner.

Half an hour before the steamer started a thick set man with a sandy moustache, florid face, dressed in the height of the fashion, with a solitary diamond glistening on his shirt front, came up to Officer Kaiser and told him that he was a New York detective, and after a young man and woman whom he suspected were going to Europe, and asked the officer to arrest them. The description the detective gave answered to that of the

THE EXECUTION OF PHEBE CAMPBELL.

Her last Moments—Her Written Statement Read—She Dies Without a Struggle—The Disposition of Her Body, etc.

London, June 20.—The last act in the "Missouri tragedy" took place this morning, and Phoebe Campbell has expired upon the scaffold for the horrible murder for which she was convicted in April last. Perhaps in the annals of the Canadian calendar of crime, there has never been one, which for a time was so completely wrapped in mystery, as the killing of George Campbell. The extraordinary statements made by the prisoner, and the varying nature of them, at once pointed to her as the culprit; but even to within a fortnight ago, when she made the confession implicating herself, and her accomplice Coyle, now in gaol, she stoutly maintained her innocence, as the day of death drew near, and all hope of a reprieve has gone. She appears to have felt it her bounden duty, to tell all she knew about the murder, and it will be remembered how positively she states that Coyle was her accomplice. The latter keeps sullenly silent about the matter, and will neither confess or deny the charge. During a conversation held with him yesterday, he referred to the execution of Mrs. Campbell, as a matter of course, and said, "if she wanted to see him, he did not mind; he should like to wish her good-bye," but he manifested no great anxiety for the interview. Mrs. Campbell kept up her spirits most wonderfully, and yesterday when the reporter visited her, she chatted about various matters, and laughed heartily several times, looking and acting very unlike a person on the verge of eternity. She spent a considerable portion of last night in making little souvenirs of colored cloth, with locks of her hair attached. She layed down for about an hour, but did not sleep. The Rev. Canon Innes, Rev. Geo. Richardson, Rev. Dr. Cooper, Miss Mercer, Mrs. Osborne, and the Matron of the Gaol remained with her the greater part of the night, and attended to her spiritual wants. She was perfectly resigned and even anxious to meet her fate, alluding to the scaffold as being the gate to heaven. She prayed earnestly for Coyle, hoping that he might make a full confession of his share of the crime. While all round her were people weeping there was not the slightest sign of emotion to be detected on her face, nor did her demeanour betray any nervousness. When the executioner—the same who hanged Travis—entered her cell, robed in a hideous mask and gown, she cautiously rose from the bed on which she was sitting at the time, and advanced to meet him. When about to pinion her the matron suggested that the operation should be performed down stairs on the scaffold, to which Mrs. Campbell said, "Oh yes, it will do down stairs."

At twenty-two minutes past eight o'clock she was told her last moments had arrived, and taking the arms of the matron and Miss Mercer, she walked with a firm step, and unmoved countenance, out of her cell, down stairs to the corridor leading to the gaol yard, where she shook hands with a few persons she recognized, wishing them farewell in an earnest tone of voice. She walked steadily up the gangway of the scaffold, carrying last words. Prepare to meet me in heaven where I am just now a-going. Good-bye to all, and God bless you all.

(Signed)

'MRS. PHEBE CAMPBELL.'

"My last statement that I made is true both in the sight of me and my God."

She was then placed on the drop, which she knelt upon and prayed earnestly until, at a signal from the Sheriff, the bolt was drawn, and the unfortunate creature launched into eternity. When she fell it was found that the rope was too long, and her feet were but a few inches from the ground, and the hangman had to take the rope in his hand and haul her up.

Death must have been instantaneous, for she never moved a muscle, with the exception of closing of the hand in which she held her handkerchief.

After hanging about half an hour, the body was placed in a plain shell, and an inquest was held, as required by the Act, after which she was interred in the gaol yard, near to Pickard's grave, who was hung in December last.

She was particularly anxious before death that her body should not be given over to the surgeons for dissection, and a promise was made her that it should not be. There was little or no change in her appearance after death, with the exception of a livid mark round the neck, caused by the rope. The face was of course pale, but did not convey the idea of her having suffered any pain. The neck was dislocated completely, the drop being about seven feet.

A black flag was hoisted at the gaol, and for an hour this morning the bell of the cathedral was rung as for a funeral. There were about 50 people present. The Sheriff very properly limited the number of tickets he issued, to the members of the press, a few surgeons, and some members of the legal profession. The affair created a great sensation in the city, and the banks of the river near the gaol were crowded with people, but the scaffold was so arranged, as to prevent any one from the outside of the walls seeing what was transacted on it.

The description the detective gave answered to that of the runaway couple.

Officer Kaiser asked the detective what the charge was against them, and said if he would be justified in making the arrest he would willingly do it. The detective refused to state the nature of the charge, so the officer refused to make an arrest, as he declared that he wanted to know for what cause he should arrest people. The would-rd detective left without making an arrest.

When the steamer had departed, Officer Kaiser went to the gaunt countryman, who was watching the noble vessel as she was swinging out into the stream, and questioned him about his late passengers. The countryman was very guarded in his answers. He would give no account of himself, but said he brought a young couple from Long Island, who had run away from home, and were married in New York. The groom's name was George Edward Brown, and the bride's Clara Louisa Smith, both belonging to some of the best families on Long Island. Early on Saturday, at an appointed time and place, they clandestinely met, and he carried them to New York, as they wished to avoid the ears. The carriage was heavily curtained, and in the morning he carried them to a minister up town where they were married. The minister received $20, of which he gave him $5 as a commission.

At 1 o'clock the countryman was ordered to wait for them at Sixth avenue and Twenty-third street. After they had been made one, they went to the Fifth Avenue Hotel, where they took breakfast, and then went out shopping on Sixth avenue, but they were cautious about their movements. Their baggage had been shipped on Friday directly for Hamburg.

They returned to Fifth Avenue Hotel, where they dined, and at the appointed hour they got into the carriage and were driven to Hoboken. The countryman got $25 for his job.

Shortly after the steamer sailed a fine carriage, with prancing steeds, driven by a man in showy livery, came dashing on the pier. An elderly woman forced her head out of a window, and almost fainted when she discovered that the steamer had already sailed. Seeing officer Kaiser near by she called him, and asked him whether he saw a young lady go aboard the steamer, and then gave a description of her. The officer replied affirmatively, and added that he might make a full confession of his share of the crime. While all round her were people weeping there was not the slightest sign of emotion to be detected on her face, nor did her demeanour betray any nervousness. She walked steadily up the gangway of the scaffold, carefully gathering up the skirts of her long black dress, as if afraid of soiling or stepping upon it, and turning her back to the persons present, submitted without a tremor to the operation of being pinioned, watching with a curious gaze, the movements of the executioner. While this was going on the Rev. Mr. Innis read the following statement:

June 19th, 1872.—My dear friends—I now speak to let you know how thankful I be to you for your kindness. The Sheriff has been very kind to me, and Mr. Samuel Glass has been very kind, and Mr. Innis I will say that he has labored hard for me, and done all that lay in his power and with the help of God to save my soul, and I now thank him for it; and Mr. Richardson, he attended me very close, and done what he could, and I thank him for his kindness; and Mr. Nash has also been very kind to me, and done what he could, and I thank him for his kindness; and Mr. Cooper done what he could for me, and I thank him, and there was a great many dear Christian friends that called to see me, and gave me a good advice, the same as all others; and I thank them for all their kindness; and Miss Mercer has visited me ever since I was here, and done all that lay in her power for me, and I am so thankful to her for her kindness, and trust that I will meet them all in heaven. Oh my dear friends, I hope you take warning by what you see and hear. It is a solemn thing to die if not prepared. EVANS, MERCHE & CO.

After twenty five years' medical experience, we have never met with a remedy worthy of dependence in any Compound Syrup of Hypophosphites. This article really is reliable, and successful in a Majority of cases.

Tooth ache preceeds from ague in the face, of operating upon the exposed nerve of a decayed tooth. Rub the gum thoroughly with the finger, wet with Johnson's Anodyne Liniment, heat the face well, and lap a flannel wet with the liniment into the cavity of the tooth on cotton.

The system frequently gets out of order and should be at once regulated, else other troubles will cease; when physic is needed take Parson's Purgative Pills; they are a safe, wholesome, and not a mild medicine.

NOT QUIT SO.—"It is among the most savage and debased tribes only that the condition and comfort of the horse have been neglected," but we believe there are many in civilized countries who are guilty of the same neglect, and without the excuse of the former; here all may avail themselves of the use of an article which was done more than anything else heretofore known to improve the condition and relieve the suffering of the horse. Those who will not use it will be the losers; their horses the sufferers: to avoid both use "Darley's Condition Powders and Arabian Heave Remedy," and you will be satisfied with a result. Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hurd & Co., is on each package. Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, Ontario, proprietors for Canada. Sold by all medicine dealers.

A Chemical Food and Nutritive Tonic.

THE GREAT POPULARITY OF DR. WHEELER'S COMPOUND ELIXIR OF PHOSPHATES AND CALSVEA is owing to its perfect reliability in building up constitutions run down with diseases of the Stomach, Liver and Kidneys, which arise from Dyspepsia or Feeble Digestion, and result in a poor blood and breaking down of the general health. It effectually relieves pain or a sense of fullness in the Stomach after eating, Heart-burn, Flatulence, Constipation from torpid Liver, Bilious Headaches, Irritation of the Kidneys and Bladder from the real deposit in the Urine, irritability and restlessness, followed by nervous prostration and general debility, which inevitably arise from the one common cause, Dyspepsia or Feeble Digestion. All those delicate constitutions that lack energy and vitality, and are unable to arouse themselves to any exertion or undergo any fatigue, will be astonished at the rapidity with which the whole system is raised out of this prostrate condition and energized and vitalized under the use of this preparation. It is harmless, delicious, does not lose its effect, and is not followed by a relapse. Sold at $1.00.

THOMAS' ELECTRIC OIL
Worth Ten Times its Weight in Gold. Do you know anything of it? If not, it is time you did.

You cannot say where it is used. It is the cheapest Medicine ever made. One dose cures common Sore Throat. One bottle has cured Erysipelas. Fifty cents worth has cured an Old Stomach Complaint. One or two bottles cures bad cases of Piles and Kidney Troubles. Six to eight applications cure any case of Excoriated Nipples or Inflamed Breasts. One bottle has cured a lame Boy of eight years standing. Dr. J. H. Thompson, of Brooklyn, N. Y., says, "I have used thirty bottles for a Sore of your Oil, which effected a Wonderful Cure." "A Crooked Limb by six applications." Another "who had Asthma for years, says, 'I have half of a cent bottle left, and I should not buy it if I could get no more.'"

Rufus Robinson, of Nunda, N. Y., writes: "One small bottle of your Electric Oil restored the voice where the person had not spoken above a whisper for five years." Rev. J. Mallory, of Wrentham, N. Y., writes: "Your Electric Oil cured me of Erysipelas in one week." Dealers all over the country say: We have never sold a medicine that has given such complete satisfaction as this.

It is composed of six of the Best Oils that are known. It is as good to take as for external use, and is believed to be immeasurably superior to anything ever made. It will save you much suffering and many dollars of expense. It is sold by one or more dealers in every place where these circulars are found. Price, 25 cents. Why not buy it today? Prepared by Caution. Caution.

To the Public of the British Provinces of North America.

I beg most respectfully to acquaint the public of the British North American provinces that in May, 1871, I caused the business at 89, Maiden Lane, New York, for the sale of HOLLOWAY'S PILLS AND OINTMENT, which were up to that time prepared by William Brown, now deceased, to be closed. I regret to say that I have reason to know that the management of the late business had for some years, and in many ways, been most corrupt, and it may be that the Pills and Ointment were not prepared with that care I have always desired.

Those who do not wish to be deceived by whooping spurious medicines, which are now likely to emanate from the States or elsewhere, but to possess themselves of the genuine HOLLOWAY'S PILLS AND OINTMENT, manufactured by me in London, England, will do well to see that each pot and box bears the British Government stamp, on which is engraved the words "HOLLOWAY'S PILLS AND OINTMENT," and that the address on the label is 533 OXFORD STREET, LONDON, where only they are manufactured, and in no other part of the world. The retail prices are on the labels in British currency, and not in dollars and cents.

No representative of mine will ever travel through any part of the British Provinces, or the United States, either to sell or to take orders for my Pills and Ointment, and as I have reason to believe that attempts will very probably be made to deceive the public in this way by persons calling upon medicine vendors, falsely representing that they are acting for me, and with my knowledge and consent, I deem it advisable to put the public on their guard against any such deceptions.

I most earnestly entreat all those who may read this advertisement that they be pleased, in the public interest, to communicate the purport of the same to their friends that they may not

Advertising alone does not produce success. The thing which is advertised must have intrinsic merit, or else large advertising will eventually do it more harm than good. If you have anything which you know to be good, advertise it thoroughly, and you will be sure to succeed; if it is poor, don't praise it, for people will soon discover you are lying.

Such is the policy of the BURLINGTON ROUTE, which runs to three great regions in the West: 1st, To Omaha, connecting with the great Pacific Roads. 2d, To Lincoln, the capital of Nebraska, and all that beautiful region south of the Platte, filled with R. R. lands and homesteads. 3d, To St. Joseph, Kansas city and all Kansas points.

The roads are splendidly built, have the best bridges, finest cars, the Miller platform and coupler, and the safety air brake (to prevent the loss of life that is every where else happening); Pullman's sleepers, Pullman dining cars, large and powerful engines (to make quick time and good connections), and are in a word the best equipped roads in the West. So that if you desire to go safely, surely, quickly and comfortably to any point in Southern Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, or on the Pacific Roads, be sure that you go "By Way of Burlington."

Worthington, Ohio, May 22, 1866.

Dear Sir: I bear willing testimony to the sterling merits of ALLEN'S LUNG BALSAM for all Pulmonary troubles. I had a very distressing cough, and the BALSAM gave me immediate relief and permanent benefit. I have had a severe attack of Pleurisy and by its aid was relieved and cured. I am satisfied that all that is necessary to convince any one of its merits, would only be to make a trial of it, and I cheerfully recommend it to all whose condition demands anything of this nature, asking for it an impartial trial, and believing they will, and hoping they may be benefitted as much as I was myself.

I am respectfully etc.,

S. R. TAYLOR.

Don't despair because all other remedies have failed, but try this remedy and you will not be deceived.

ADAM WALKER, of Tavestock, Ont., writes in February 1868, that after trying many cough and lung remedies for a severe cold which he has suffered with for three years, he procured ALLEN'S LUNG BALSAM, and was much benefitted by it. In a letter still later he said his night sweats were all gone, and he was rapidly recovering, his appetite was much better, and he felt like a new man.

The Guelph, Ont., Mercury says, in issue of Feb. 12th 1869: "The LUNG BALSAM sold by PERCY DAVIS & SON, is not like many of the nostrums for sale; but has proved itself a valuable medicine when taken for relief in cases

EVERY MACHINE FULLY WARRANTED

Its superiority over all other Machines for family use is so apparent as to be beyond question; all its working parts are made of the best material and every piece is made to a "guage," and "inter-changeable," a highly important feature to the users, as any part accidentally broken can be replaced at once without the cost and trouble of returning the machine for repairs.

In short, for Simplicity, Durability, quality of work, elegance of appearance, and ease of operation, it stands entirely without a rival—the lightning-like rapidity of its operation—the absolute certainty with which it works—and the novelty and beauty of its construction being truly wonderful.

Ayer'sHair Vigor,For restoring to Gray Hair its natural Vitality and Color.A dressing which is at once agreeable, healthy, and effective for preserving the hair. It soon restores faded or gray hair to its original color, with thegloss and freshness of youth. Thin hair is thickened, falling hair checked, and baldness often, though not always, cured by its use. Nothing can restore the hair where the follicles are destroyed, or the glands atrophied and decayed; but such as remain can be saved by this application, and stimulated into activity, so that a new growth of hair is produced. Instead of fouling the hair with a pasty sediment, it will keep it clean and vigorous.
Its occasional use will prevent the hair from turning gray or falling off, and consequently prevent baldness. The restoration of vitality it gives to the scalp arrests and prevents the formation of dandruff, which is often so unpleasant and offensive. Free from those irritating substances which make some preparations dangerous and injurious to the hair, the Vigor can only benefit but not harm it. If wanted merely for a FAIR DRESSING, nothing else can be found so desirable.
Containing neither oil nor dye, it does not soil white cambric, and yet lasts long on the hair, giving it a rich, glossy lustre, and a grateful perfume.Prepared by Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co.,

A GREAT MEDICAL DISCOVERY.

DEPEW'S MEDICAL VICTORY.

DR. DEPEW, OF PARIS, FRA' SOC. an eminent physician of foreign descent, has discovered a Great Blood Remedy—a Purifying Medical Compound—named by physicians, Depew's Medical Victory, that cures every kind of unhealthy humor, and every disease that depends on impurity of the Blood, where the Lungs, Liver, and Kidneys, or any other vital organs, are not wasted beyond hope of repair.

For the cure of Scrofula, Erysipelas, Rheumatism, Eczema, Scald Head, Scat, Eruption of the Skin, Ulcers, and every Sore of all kinds, Boils, Humors in the Mouth and Throat, or any other parts of the face, it stands pre-eminent ly at the head of all other remedies. The fact is: It cures Scrofula, and Disease of the Skin, of whatever name or nature, are literally dug up and carried out of the system, in a short time, by the use of this Blood Remedy. One bottle, in such cases, will convert the most incredulous of its curative effects.

Cleanse the Vitiated Blood whenever you find its impurities bursting through the skin in Pimples, Eruptions, or Sores; cleanse it when you find it obstructed and sluggish in the veins; cleanse it when it is foul, and your feelings will tell you when. Keep the Blood pure and the health of the system will follow.

It is a Gentle Regulating Purgative, as well as a Tonic, &c. Possessing also the peculiar merit of acting as a powerful agent in relieving Congestion, and Chronic Inflammation of the Liver and all the Visceral Organs.

For Female Complaints, whether in young or old, married or single, at the dawn of womanhood, or at the turn of life, the Medical Victory has no equal.

In the cure of Rheumatism, Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, and diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, its effects are surprising to all. For Regulating the Bowels, and curing Biliousness, Headache, Sick-Headache, Neuralgia, Female Weakness, Nervousness, Pains in the Side, Loins and Back, and general Weakness and Debility, its curative powers are beyond money and beyond price. IT IS THE GREAT BLOOD PURIFIER, AND A LIFE-GIVING PRINCIPLE, a perfect Renovator and Invigorator of the System, carrying off all poisonous matter and restoring the Blood to its healthy condition.
